Peace Comes Closer
The Queen's Ring
Mr. Teagle Says No

Paris reports England and France preparing to settle the Italo-Ethiopian war, giving territory to Mussolini. Ethiopia will do whatever England says, and Mussolini will accept peace, if he gets what he wants.

Meanwhile, he has cancelled all leaves of absence from his navy, strengthened the fighting air fleet, and his army of 1,000,000 men is ready. Is is probable that France will find some arrangement that Mussolini can accept.

Hundreds of chiefs of tribes control the greater part of the so-called empire, and Selassie would be safer with Mussolini to help regulate the independent chiefs.

It is inconceivable that European countries should risk a war in Europe to come for the sake of maintaining the right of Ethiopia to continue the business of selling slaves and mutilating children.

Ethiopia is still "going" to hurl 500,000 warriors against the Italian invader. It is difficult to "hurl" 500,000 when they must go on foot, and on bare feet through jungles and up narrow canyons against deadly machine guns

There is no question as to the courage of the Ethiopians, but Mussolini might repeat the old saying:

"The wolf does not care how many the sheep are."

There is one happy Ethiopian, named Ras Gugsa. Son-in-law of the Emperor Haile Selassie, he began the war by deserting to Mussolini, taking his fighting men with him. Now he is governor of Tigre Province, by the grace of Mussolini, and is happy on the Italian side of the line, "buying new clothes, perfumes and other gifts for his women friends." He is going to Europe to do more shopping just as soon as the war is over. Wise is he who knows the winning side, if his conscience keeps quiet.

England's two biggest battleships in the Mediterranean, originally sent to "scare" Mussolini, are going out through the Straits of Gibraltar, from which the anti-submarine boom has been removed. Reason given —"Short cruises for the benefit of the crews."

The real reason may be that peace is not distant, and England wants to show goodwill.

The 42,000-ton battleship Hood will go to Madeira, producing the fine wine of which, as Universal Service reminds you, George Washington drank a bottle a day.

To Mussolini's "fund of gold" the Queen of Italy has sent the gold wedding ring that King Victor Emmanuel put on her finger when they were married.

Queen Elena, by birth a princess of Montenegro, writes to Mussolini: "My wedding ring represents the dearest thing I possess, because it reminds me of the day when I had the fortune to become an Italian."

Italians take patriotism seriously.

Walter C. Teagle, head of Standard Oil of New Jersey, did not make a deal to supply Mussolini with all his oil for thirty years, casually arranging to finance the Italian oil market up to $300,000,000. Mr. Teagle says so, and it is so. BUT when the wise John D. Rockefeller once said, "I want to see my managers, their desks cleared, and their feet on the desks, studying how to make money for Standard Oil," he had men like Walter Teagle in mind.

Mr. Teagle has a Standard Oil business in Italy, and if anybody gets the big 30-year contract, on a business basis, he probably will get it.

In Georgetown, British Guiana, a kindly clergyman sprinkled a tiny Negro baby, just born, naming him "Roosevelt Selassie Caleb." The boy's parents, descendants of slaves, say the name was chosen to honor "the greatest man in the world, President Roosevelt."

The little baby may wonder later why his parents dragged in Haile Selassie, in whose empire slavery still exists as a major industry.

Don C. Seitz, first-class newspaper man in both editorial and business departments, is dead, only 73 years old.

Don Seitz did good work for Joseph Pulitzer, one of the "big four" of American newspaper history. He had the faculty of really believing that his newspaper and its owner were always right and everybody else always WRONG.

DEMAND TAX CUT, GOLD RETURN

New York, Dec. 5 (INS) —Indicating its growing distrust of the economic and social policies of the national administration, the National Association of Manufacturers today prepared to adopt a platform for business disowning the recovery efforts of President Roosevelt.

The platform, submitted to delegates as the final session of the manufacturers' 40th annual convention got under way, was expected to be adopted this afternoon with little or no change in form or phrasing.

Calling for a "return of the American system" in government, the platform bristled with direct and implied criticism of the President's policies, in startling contrast to that adopted by the manufacturers' group last year. At that time, the association drafted and ratified a resolution pledging friendly cooperation with the administration.

BLAMES WORLD WAR

Revival of private enterprise, the draft platform asserted, is the one means of hastening national recovery.

"This revival," the document asserted, "is being prevented by a persistent departure from the proven principles of social and economic organization on which American progress, prosperity and civilization have been built.

"This American system has not failed. It has not collapsed. It did not break down in depression because of weaknesses or evils inherent in the system.

"Depression came because a great war ate the heart out of the world's store of capital and

BRITISH CHIEF WARNS JAPAN

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—A British warning to Japan against aggression in China, and an overture to Italy to end aggression in Ethiopia were extended by Sir Samuel Hoare, Foreign Secretary, in the House of Commons.

"I can only regard it as unfortunate," Hoare said, "that events should have taken place which, whatever the actual truth of the matter may be, lend color to the belief that Japanese influence is exerted to shape Chinese internal political developments and administrative arrangements.

"Anything which tends to create this belief can only do harm to the prestige of Japan and hamper developments, which we all desire, of the friendliest mutual relations between Japan and her neighbors and friends."

WOMAN AND 3 POISONED BY RELIEF FOOD

Made ill by eating canned hamburger stamped with the mark of the "Texas Relief Commission," a Jamaica Plain mother and her three children were rushed today to City Hospital, where they are in a serious condition.

The patients are Mrs. Mary Jackson, 35, of Boylston street; May Jackson, 13; Theresa, 9, and Dorothy, 3.

This afternoon police were attempting to locate the husband and father, William Jackson, employed by the American Railway Express Company, according to police.

EATEN AT NOONTIME

At the company offices police were told, they said, he had not reported for work today.

The canned hamburger was eaten at noontime and a short time later Mrs. Jackson and the children became nauseated.

CALLS AMBULANCE

She summoned Dr. Frederick Schmidt of 179 School street, Jamaica Plain, and when he arrived the four sufferers were writhing in agony.

The doctor put in an emergency call for a police ambulance and took the four patients to City Hospital.

TVA ATTACKED IN HIGH COURT

Washington, Dec. 5 (INS)—The Supreme Court was told today that a decision holding the TVA act constitutional would expose every "essential industry" in the nation to the treat of government competition.

The declaration was made in a brief filed in behalf of minority stockholders of the Alabama Power Co., who are seeking to have the Tennessee Valley Authority law declared unconstitutional.

STOCKS FIRM

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Metals and specialty shares took command of the stock market today and forged ahead for gains of major fractions to more than a point despite backsliding rails and other scattered issues.

The closing tone was firm.

B. U. BANS LIQUOR, 'CHEEK' DANCING

The use of liquor, cheek-to-cheek and "streamline" dancing are taboo at Boston University undergraduate affairs, it was decreed at the Beck Bay institution today.

Any organization which countenances liquor at its social affairs will be blacklisted from the university year book and the B. U. News, and outlawed from student attendance, Dean Lucy Franklin announced today.

Elimination of liquor from all "undergrad" social functions has been practically completed, the dean of women said, and a new movement to remove "cheek-to-cheek" dancing is under way.

Reforms are being carried out through the active co-operation of seniors, the dean of women added.

Girls of the senior class, Dean Franklin said, have been organized to teach the freshmen social technique and conduct at social affairs.

"Streamline" dancing, which brings the male and female upper waistline figures in closer proximity than the colleges officials sanction, is definitely banned.

It took the university officials three years successfully to achieve elimination of liquor at social affairs, she continued, with drastic enforcement still in effect.

"The university will not recognize any organization at whose social affairs liquor is used. The names of such organizations are not printed in the university year book, nor in the Boston University News and cannot count upon having Boston University students at their social functions," she continued.

MOTOR EXCISE TAX BOOSTED

An increase of 32 cents per thousand in the motor vehicle excise was announced today by Tax Commissioner Henry F. Long.

This is the fifth increase in the excise tax law for motor vehicles since the law became effective in 1929. The rate is based on the local tax rate throughout the state during a period of three years.

Commissioner Long said:

"Motor vehicles in 1929 were for the first time taken from local taxation, and being no longer subject to a tax under the local rate on the full and fair cash value of the machine, was subjected to the state rate in the form of an excise, measured on the depreciation value of the vehicle."

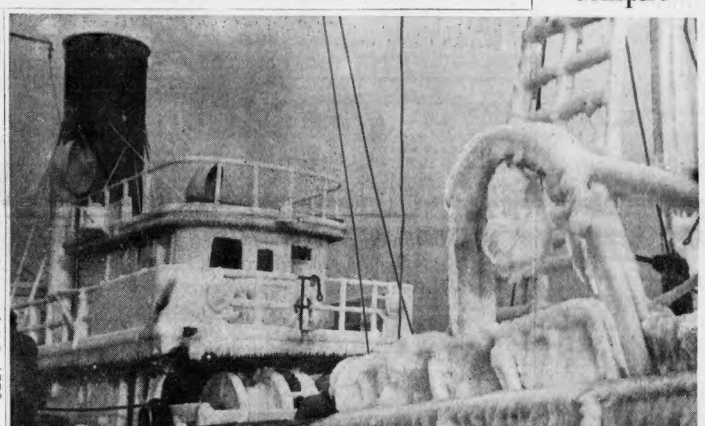
When Neptune And Boreas Conspire



(Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

When winter clamps its relentless hand on the North Atlantic seaboard, the business of bringing fish into Boston becomes more than ever a hazardous and a rigorous occupation. Here's the steam trawler Gale, tied up at the Fish Pier, South Boston, with deck, bows, superstructure and rigging all a mass of ice. Stinging salt spray froze as it hit while the staunch little vessel was beating her way into port. Heavily listed and deep laden, she finally made harbor safely. (Story on Page 2.)

AIR PISTOL CASE GIVEN TO GRAND JURORS

Police charged Roosevelt and De Florez, M. I. T. students, peppered pedestrians passing beneath windows of the exclusive "6 Club" on Memorial drive with the two target pistols, one the 1.77 and the other a .22 repeater.

The twice-postponed hearing of the pair opened dramatically before a jammed gallery of spectators in East Cambridge District court.

He testified that either pistol would kill at 50 feet if it struck a person's temple.

DANGEROUS WEAPONS

Seibolt considered both weapons dangerous up to 150 feet, he said, although he added that they would not have much effect unless they struck an eye or the temple at that distance.

He made tests on a soft pine board, Seibolt told the court, to find out just how deeply the two German made guns would penetrate.

The 1.77 went 3-16ths of an inch into the board, he said, and the .22 penetrated 1-16th of an inch.

Then, to show the weapon was not dangerous, Louis de Florez, New York engineer and father of one youth, tore open his coat, offered his breast as a target to Sergeant Seibolt, and challenged:

"Shoot!"

FIRES POINT BLANK

Sergeant Seibolt, who had but a moment before testified that the 1.77 calibre air pistol he held in his hand could kill at 50 feet, took aim.

He fired—point plank—at a distance of five feet.

CRIPPLED SHIP FIGHTS WAY TO PORT; 8 FISHERMEN HURT

After battling with rough seas, ice, cold weather and high winds, eight Massachusetts fishermen were under treatment today for injuries and exhaustion.

Thirteen hours overdue, rudderless and encased in ice, the schooner Onward Three limped into Gloucester harbor early today, after being the object of a search by Coast Guards.

At Orleans two men, Herbert Eddy, 30, of Orleans Center, and Earl Youngren, 35, of Rock Harbor, were saved from the pounding surf.

Captain Arthur Ricker, of Portland, Me., skipper of the Onward Three, said the rudder was smashed at noon yesterday 25 miles off shore.

On the Cape, Eddy and Youngren were dragging for quahaugs when the northwesterly gale became too much for them.

They put into the lee of Billingsgate Island with fishermen in other boats. The other vessels left for Rock Harbor about dusk, but the two men remained until the tide turned.

When they started for Rock Harbor, their rudder became disabled and they began drifting helplessly for ten rock-strewn shore.

Soaking blankets in gasoline, Youngren and Eddy lighted them and held them up as distress signals.

Four Orleans men, sighting the signal, put out in another quahaug dragger, but were forced back when the two boats collided.

Coast Patrol Hunts 2 Gloucester Trawlers

Gloucester, Dec. 5 (AP)—Coast Guard patrol boats today were asked to be on the lookout for two Gloucester trawlers, unreported since theyleft for the fishing grounds yesterday morning.

The boats, the Nimbus and the Lucy W., each with a two-man crew, usually return each night. Alex Garron and his son, Chester, are aboard the Nimbus, and Henry Foster and Manuel Mitchell comprise the Lucy W's crew.

Time to Call All Hands; It's No One-Man Job!

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

One man and one mallet are obviously not enough for the job of clearing the ice-encrusted rigging of the trawler, Edith Boudreau, tied up at the South Boston fish pier, after beating into port through zero gales. The little vessel is one of many showing visible signs today of the ordeal to which its crew was subjected as the present cold snap shut relentlessly down on the North Atlantic. Seaman Morris Flowers is doing his best to get the situation in hand, but his need of reinforcements is evident.

Honor for the Guitar

Madrid, Dec. 5 (AP)—The old-fashioned guitar, famed in Spanish romantic history, has entered high musical circles for the first time.

RETURN TO AMERICAN SYSTEM OF GOVERNMENT SOUGHT

Essentials of this system, to which the manufacturers demanded a return, the platform set forth as:

Maintenance of constitutional guarantees and preservation of the constitution in historic form; fostering of individual enterprise and initiative; abolition of undue governmental regulation of the business and social life of the nation; reduction of government expenditures, debt and taxes to normal operating figures; a currency based on a dollar of fixed gold content; and adherence to the theory of "economic progress based on individual achievement, self-reliance and thrift."

VITAL TO RECOVERY

Adherence to constitutional guarantees the platform laid down as of paramount importance for recovery.

"Confidence," stated the draft, "cannot be restored or maintained when government officials and Legislators endeavor, in spite of their oath of office, to avoid by technicalities the true intent of constitutional guarantees or deliberately to legislate with respect to matters not delegated to them.

"The normal and effective functioning of the American system is impossible unless the guarantees upon which it operates are maintained."

"National economic planning by government seeks to balance production and consumption by centralizing decisions in the hands of a few. No small group of men can possess the wisdom, foresight and discernment required to plan, direct and stimulate the activities of all nor will planning by political agencies be free from influences and motives unrelated to the questions before them."

HAMSTRUNG RECOVERY

Administration efforts along these lines, the draft hinted, has hamstrung recovery by "undue regulation of the financing of business which discourages the flow of capital and credit into private enterprise . . . attempts to regulate or control production . . . which crystalize inefficient methods . . . hours of work, rates of pay and other working conditions that result in . . . discord, strife and impairment of productive efficiency."

As to taxes and government spending, the draft declared the government has no valid sanction to use its taxing power arbitrarily to penalize thrift and success."

Sound recovery, it stated, must include reduction of Government expenditures to those "proper and necessary" to ordinary Government functions, establishment of a fixed gold content dollar and limitation of the use of Government's supervisory powers over banking and credit. It adds:

The obstruction of recovery and the continuance of nation-wide distress are due to policies that have destroyed the guarantees on which American business depends, experimented with the currency and credit of the nation, created a vast burden of public debt, interfered with freedom of contract, attempted to substitute Government enterprise of private citizens and finally have undertaken to alter or reorganize the American system without regard to the destructive results on finance, investment production and employment."

Warning that continuation of the government's social and economic policies may destroy American democracy and with it western civilization, S. Wells Utley, president of the Detroit Steel Casting Company, called on American business to repudiate those policies and "go to the country" on that issue.

In an impassioned address to the closing session, Utley warned:

"If the United States succumbs . . . it is inevitable that the civilization of the modern world will crumble on her ruins."

In all the world, he told the manufacturers, only "the thin fringe of countries facing the Atlantic" today are under governments believing in "the freedom of the individual mans . . . the principles of the Christian religion."

England with the freezing temperatures

Weather bureau officials today declared that the mercury will continue to climb through the day, dropping again to the middle twenties in the night. No heavy snow storm was in sight for Boston.

Victims of the season's first real cold spell were:

WHYNOCK, Mrs. Luella, 63, Main street, Brockton, dropped dead in street near her home, a victim of a heart attack due to the cold.

COLLERAN, William, 60, Rockview place, Jamaica Plain, struck and killed by the auto of John Munday, 19, Jamaica Plain, whose vision was obscured by clouds of steam from the machine's partially frozen radiator.

RAGNALI, Thomas, 55, Swansea, also a victim of a heart attack induced by the extreme cold.

Boston's minimum temperature was 7 above zero, three degrees higher than the record low for the date, established in 1906.

Highways in Boston and New England were filled with disabled automobiles, stalled by the cold or with frozen radiators gushing clouds of steam. Garages had their busiest day in months.

Accidents were also numerous because of the wind and poor visibility and ice-coated sidewalks made footing hazardous for pedestrians in many sections.

Firemen were busy throughout Greater Boston extinguishing blazes caused when heating systems were overtaxed by householders seeking relief from the sudden cold.

East Boston tunnel traffic was slowed to a snail's pace. With temperature 20 degrees higher than outside, clouds of vapor formed, obscuring vision and making slow progress necessary to avoid accident.

VIGILANTES! Secret Student Body at Harvard

Plan to Act on Noisy, Troublesome Bibblers

(Why have Harvard students been in so many escapades that brought unfavorable publicity recently? Miss Marsters is attempting to give a fair picture of the social life of Harvard. This is her fifth story. The sixth will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

By ANN MARSTERS

Maybe the Harvard students are going to solve this drinking problem all by themselves, without any interference from college authorities.

Ann Marsters

"The fair name of Harvard," he said, "has been getting a little muddy because of recent well - publicized incidents.

"Several upperclassmen have realized the seriousness of these events and their effect upon the reputation of the college.

"And so, having in mind the increased drinking and habitual drinking by a minority group, we have formed a sort of Vigilante committee.

"Our committee has not started to operate yet, but as soon as plans are completed we expect to take several cases into our own hands."

(And oh, what plans the committee has up its sleeve!)

"For example," he continued, "if a member or members of this group spots an intoxicated student in public, he or they will take him to his room and sober him up."

That should be easy enough, for it sounds as though this group were going to give several boys a terrific surprise.

"We will use the old-fashioned method," continued the student, "of ducking him in a tub of cold water."

Perhaps the mere thought of it will make a few Harvardians shiver. And that is not to be the limit of the committee's disciplinary measures—once it gets going.

Dennet Speaks

"If a student under the influence of liquor is seen attempting to drive an automobile, it is our purpose to pull him from behind the wheel and take the keys away from him. Anybody can get in a lot of trouble by driving when he's tight—and maybe we can help keep the Harvard students out of the headlines.

"And if we find that certain students are unable to drink their liquor as a Harvard man should, we will 'blacklist' him and pass the word around to bar him from parties until he can prove that he can drink like a gentleman."

Thus the "Secret Vigilante Committee" issues its ultimatum—and won't it be interesting (or amusing) to see what happens when it begins to carry out its threats?

Now there is a young man who offers to sum up the whole drinking situation at Harvard, in what he calls a sane, logical manner.

He is Raymond Dennet, president of the Phillips Brooks House Association, and a member of the Student Council.

"The present question of drinking at Harvard," he said, "has come into prominence because of two unfortunate incidents which are not at all typical of the college. The cause of these affairs lies wholly with the individuals involved and is not traceable to general conditions.

"I admit that there is probably more drinking now than before repeal—simply because it is easier to get liquor. But there is no more drinking this year than last, nor have I seen any signs of anything resembling great excess.

"There is such a small minority who haven't the self-control to act decently—but it is these few students who have brought unfavorable incidents to public attention.

"There has been a general reaction, lately, against noisy parties which will probably lead to a saner outlook."

Dennet suggested that this whole subject has been exaggerated far out of its importance, and that people seem to forget to take into consideration the other aspects of student activity. After all, there are studies, social service, and the everyday college program.

"For example," said Dennet, "there are nearly three hundred students who are connected in some way with our work at Phillips Brooks House, either doing social service, speaking, or assisting foreign students."

As for those who are in no way connected with Harvard—some will condemn with shocked disapproval and some will defend the students and their drinking habits.

Lauds Students

When you are looking for them, it is not difficult to find those who will rally 'round the Crimson flag to give it a few boosts upward.

One such person is the owner of Boston's smartest night-club—Ben Ginsberg, of the Club Mayfair on Broadway.

Along with the hotel supper rooms, the Mayfair draws Harvard trade, and Mr. Ginsberg is, and has been, in a position to observe the students—and to draw conclusions.

"I believe," said Ginsberg, "that the Harvard students of today are far superior to those of the past.

"And I think repeal has had an admirable effect upon them. They need no longer drink furtively, and from my observations, they have a fine, wholesome sense of how to have a good time.

"Let them have all the freedom they want at college. I think it is good for them. It develops their sense of responsibility and independence. And it's only logical that such qualities will make finer men of them; will better prepare them to go out into the world and fight their own battles."

(The "Harvard problem" will be reported from another angle by Miss Marsters in a continuance of this series in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.)

Feels Much Better With Whistle Out

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Little Joan Walsh, five, of Baldwin street, Cambridge, is feeling better, thanks to a surgical operation at Cambridge City Hospital, where doctors removed from her throat the toy whistle which she is holding in her hand. It had lodged in her esophagus after she had accidentally swallowed it. She plans to do her future whistling without artificial aids.

JOAN'S WHISTLE

FIGURES NEVER LIE

Vertical Ones Are Old Maids

New York, Dec. 5 (INS)—Girls! Do you walk sedately and maintain a straight line, vertical balance?

You do?

Holy cats! You're born to be an old maid!

At least, that's what Dd. William H. Blake, a professor of Horace Mann school, says. And Dr. Blake ought to know. He has been studying the problem of body motions for the past 25 years and has incorporated his findings in a survey called "the interpretation of bodily expressions."

If you "sway as you walk"—ah, that's a different story. If such is the case, you will soon find some soul-mate and live happily together forever after.

Dr. Blake claims to be able to read sensations and emotions—horror, frenzied anger, feebleness, tenderness, antagonism, stealth, egotism, embarrassment and resignation—not only from the face, but from the body as well.

The hands, feet, shoulders and chest all express one's feelings, he says. Even the elbows can tell a story. Take a poker game, for instance.

"The man with the weak hand who is trying to bluff can't help showing it in some part of his body, no matter how good a 'poker face' he has. He might hold his elbows close, be either motionless and tense, to his sides, thereby betraying lack of confidence.

"And if a player gets a good hand, he will make a gesture of expansion and turn his elbows outward."

So says the professor, but he also says he won't be responsible if you lose by his findings.

Runaway Tosses Policeman Rider

A runaway horse that had tossed its policeman rider threw hundreds into a turmoil of excitement along Commonwealth avenue, Allston, today.

It threaded a half mile of motor traffic at a mad pace, scattering pedestrians, somersaulted onto the top of a sedan, rolled off and continued its dash with a platoon of 22 mounted policemen in pursuit.

The horse, a big chestnut, became frightened in Commonwealth avenue outside Commonwealth armory. It was being ridden by Mounted Officer Harold O. Titus.

At Commonwealth avenue and Essex street, the horse somersaulted to the top of the sedan being driven by Arnold Murth of Rogers street, Lowell, rolled off onto the hood, crushing it, fell to the street, regained its feet and dashed down Essex street. It was captured near Beacon street.

Toy in Throat Perils Child, 5

Joan Walsh isn't so sure but that she better try whistling through her fingers.

Not quite five, Joan enjoys making a mild amount of noise. Till yesterday, she used a little tin whistle. Unfortunately it disappeared.

1000 JOIN JESUIT DRIVE

By ALAN C. FRAZER
Boston Evening American Staff Correspondent

Philadelphia, Dec. 5—The anti-Communism school, founded by St. Joseph's College, the first school of its kind in America, is now officially opened.

Enrollment, which was stopped at 863 Tuesday night, because the Jesuit instructors believed it impossible to take care of any more, increased to nearly 1000 last night when late comers begged to be admitted and were accepted.

Because of the large amount of work entailed in forming the students into classes, the beginning of classroom instruction was postponed until next Monday.

The students gathered in the auditorium of St. Joseph's High School for the formal opening of the school by the Very Rev. Thomas J. Higgins, president of St. Joseph's College.

Enthusiasm ran high among the young men and women who come from all conditions of life and are representative of scores of trades, professions and other occupations.

"This event may some day be heralded as the outstanding achievement of this city during 1935," said Father Higgins to the assembly.

"I believe we have set on foot a movement of which some day you may be very proud. You have done your part gloriously so far in thronging to this school in such large numbers, and I trust that under God we shall succeed."

The Rev. Richard M. McKeon, dean of St. Joseph's, spent all day arranging the students into classes and performing other necessary paper work with the assistance of a corps of volunteers from among the student body of St. Joseph's College and from the faculty.

2 Dead, 1 Wounded In Hotel Shooting

Chicago, Dec. 5 (AP)—Lawrence Lampe, 22, and a woman identified as Grace Osborn, 20, were shot to death today in a North Side hotel room. A man police said they believed to be Joseph Downe, a radio entertainer, was wounded.

7 Die in Mexican Riot

Needed All Nine Lives

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Its proverbial nine lives must have stood this five-months-old kitten in good stead during a four-day trip which it made from Pittston, Pa., to Boston, sealed up in a refrigerator car. It was found, chilled and hungry but unharmed, by David Noe of Cottage street, Chelsea, a market employe who opened the car in the railroad freight yard. Now the cold-proof kitten, adopted by the Blackstone street market to which the refrigerated shipment was consigned, is finding itself the special protege of Miss Dorothy Gertman.

Robber Shot Dead In Bank Holdup

Franklin, O., Dec. 5 (AP)—One of three robbers who held up the Franklin National Bank today was killed by Marshal B. B. Graham, who was wounded in an exchange of shots. The two other robbers escaped after kidnaping a woman motorist when they found the ignition key of their own machine missing.

JAIL PENALTY URGED FOR OATH DODGERS

Declaring that there is no place in American schools or colleges for teachers who have no respect for the law, Representative Cornelius F. Donovan of Lynn, today issued a scathing attack on those who refuse to sign the Teachers' Oath as prescribed.

At the same time, Representative Donovan said he has practically completed an amendment to the law which would provide fines and jail terms for those who do not comply with the law.

Pointing to the resignation of two Tufts College professors who quit their posts in protest against the compulsory law, Donovan said:

"The display of these two gentlemen does not indicate strength of purpose or intellectual independence, but rather is an unpardonable affront to the Commonwealth and to the democracy whose freedom and liberality have made it possible for them to attain whatever eminence they have reached in their respective fields."

QUIT TUFTS

Professors Earle M. Winslow and Arthur C. Lane of the Tufts faculty, and two of the most prominent instructors in the college, have resigned in protest to the law, it was learned.

It was learned that President James A. Cousens of Tufts will be reluctant to accept the resignations, but will present them at the next trustees meeting on Monday.

Bitter Weather Increases Yule Basket Fund Need

MISERY BARED IN APPEALS FOR AID

Winter's harsh grip is on Boston and New England today—and with the cold comes more suffering for the poor, the jobless and the rest of those upon whom Fortune has turned an uncompromising back.

Seated in warm homes, well fed, comfortable and content to let the bitter winds blow, you of the more fortunate have little conception of the hunger, the freezing misery and the despair in many a different home.

Children, wrapped in ragged coats, quilts, blankets—anything to make even a feeble battle against the numbing cold—huddled around the fire or sent to bed for what warmth they may find and to appease the hunger-gnawings in their young stomachs.

How would you like to be a parent in such a household and have, as your only bright ray, a fervent hope that the Christmas Basket Fund will be able to furnish your children with at least a warming, filling Christmas dinner, with perhaps enough over to go a few more meals?

More than ever before in the 23 years of the Christmas Basket Fund of the Boston Evening American and Boston Sunday Advertiser privation and suffering are prevalent this year as Christmas approaches.

In order to alleviate some of this suffering and despair the Christmas Basket Fund editor appeals to every person in New England who has anything to spare.

Any amount is welcome—pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters, bills in large or small denominations—anything. Send them to the Basket Fund, 5 Winthrop square, Boston.

Or if you would rather take care of some needy family personally, call upon or telephone the Christmas Basket Fund editor at 294 Devonshire street (Liberty 4000) and he will welcome your aid.

MAYFAIR TO HELP

Entertainments and benefit dances for the Christmas Basket Fund continued in the making today.

Last night the ball and entertainment sponsored by the Palsy-Walsy Club was held at the Normandie ballroom and was a gratifying success. This club is composed of girl employees of the American and Advertiser.

Next Sunday night at the Club Mayfair in Brookline, South End, comes another big and brilliant benefit-time, under sponsorship of Maestro Jerry Glanburg.

Today the internationally known dance team of Frank Liscleron and Evelyn Adams and the Three Variety Boys were added to the Mayfair program, which already had Ruth Lee and Buddy Rogers, snow, as well as a host of stags and radio stars including Adrian O'Brien, Larry Thornton, Carl Moore and Alice O'Leary. State officials and other dignitaries will attend.

Dinner at the Mayfair next Sunday night will be from 8 to 10, the floor show will run from 10 to 12, and there will be dancing from midnight until 2 a. m.

On Sunday, December 12, in the beautiful Casino of the Hotel Brunswick, Boylston and Clarendon streets, another Basket Fund entertainment will be held, under direction of Managing Director L. Marshall Thompson and Ernest Borden.

Two nights later, on Saturday, December 14, the Basket Fund will benefit from the annual Gala Skaters' Frolic at Boston Arena, St. Botolph street, Back Bay.

CASE No. 12

Dear Sir:

I am having a struggle at present in giving the bare necessities of life to my family. I have a wife and two small children, a boy four and a girl two. With the winter here I have to buy fuel and milk and between these two it looks doubtful about the Christmas dinner for the children. I am not on the welfare.

Thanksgiving Day was just another day. My boy was out playing with children of the neighborhood that day and came home asking what Thanksgiving Day meant. It really hurt me when I just could not explain why I had so little to give them on this day.

I am working only part time and face a hard winter. I trust in God that Christmas Day will be a day of rejoicing and the cloud that is hovering over our heads at present will be lifted by your kind generosity.

This despairing father lives in the South End. Anyone who wishes to help him may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000 and ask for Case No. (12).

CASE No. 13

I am writing this letter in hope that you will send me something for Christmas.

My husband is not working steady. He works two or three days a week. We are not on the welfare, and are ten in the family. The oldest is 15 and goes to school. We have very little money for food. The clothing that my children have are from a friend that gives them to me, anything that does not fit her family. We are very much in need of everything.

So we hope that you will send us something for Christmas. May God help you in all your work.

This family lives in the North End. Anyone wishing to help them may do so by calling the Christmas Basket Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 13.

CASE NO. 14

Gentlemen;

I am the oldest of three boys, my mother and father are not living. I am 15. We are living with a married sister who has a family of her own whose husband is working part time. We get a little aid from the welfare, but it is hardly enough to get by on. If you would kindly put us on your list the Christmas would certainly be a Godsend to us. May we hear from you?

This family lives in Allston. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case 14.

CASE NO. 15

Dear Sir:

Before I put my troubles before you let me be the first to wish you Merry Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

There are eight of us, six children, and no one working. I do not go to school for I had to leave to look for a job, but times are so hard there are none to find. I am sixteen. If Daddy works it is only once in a while. The Lord knows times are hard. Mother can't work because she is not well and has to go to the hospital several times a week. The weather is so cold during these hard times that it is hard for me to look for work.

Please don't forget me. I don't write such a good letter but God knows it means a lot. I will remember you in my prayers.

This family lives in Cambridge. Anyone who wishes to help them may do so by calling the Basket Fund Editor, Liberty 4000, and ask for Case No. 16.

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

"This proposition is perfectly clear, that no branch of the federal government—executive, legislative or judicial—can have any just powers except those which it derives through and exercises under the organic law of the union. Outside of the Constitution we have no legal authority more than private citizens, and within it we have only so much as that instrument gives us."

BRUNO VISITED BY GOVERNOR; NEW PROBE ON

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Governor Harold G. Hoffman of New Jersey today disclosed that he had visited Bruno Richard Hauptmann in his death cell in Trenton, N. J.

This disclosure followed reports published in the New York Evening Journal that the Governor had obtained new information which might save the convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby from the electric chair, or "at least delay its execution indefinitely."

Governor Hoffman said his visit to Hauptmann occurred about a month ago.

"Just a casual visit," the governor said, adding:

"Some people have been working in the matter, but I am not at liberty to discuss it."

Governor Hoffman, the paper said, initiated a private investigation last April.

"I don't know just what the investigation turned up," the Journal quoted a "high state official" as saying, "but one thing is certain:

Governor Says He Has 'Discussed' Bruno Case

Trenton, N. J., Dec. 5 (AP)—Governor Harold G. Hoffman said in a statement today that he "did not direct or order" Ellis Parker, Burlington county chief of detectives, to make an investigation of the Lindbergh kidnaping case.

The statement was issued through Parker's office at Mt. Holly.

"From the very beginning of the Lindbergh kidnaping case, Mr. Parker naturally has been interested in it, just as he is interested in all matters of importance," the statement said.

"When I went into office, the first thing Mr. Parker did was to come in and talk over the matter with me. I am interested in it, naturally, because I am a member of the court of pardons, which is a court of mercy.

DIDN'T ORDER INQUIRY

"I did not direct or order Mr. Parker to make an investigation, but all along, since I have been in office, he has discussed the matter whenever there were new developments. I cannot discuss or give any idea of my opinions in the matter because later, as a member of the court of pardons, I will have to sit and hear the appeal."

Colonel Mark O. Kimberling, state prison warden, said Parker had visited the prison several times this year, but had not seen Hauptmann, convicted murderer of the Lindbergh baby.

COULD SEE HAUPTMANN

Kimberling said the governor had not visited Hauptmann in the death house, but added he would not question the propriety of such a visit.

The law specifies that only defense attorneys, spiritual advisers, relatives and the principal keeper may visit a condemned man without a court order. The governor, however, would not require a court order, Kimberling indicated. He said that under the law, he, as principal keeper, assigns guards to the death house. If the governor asked to see Hauptmann, re said, he would give him such an assignment.

"I would not extend such a privilege to anyone else," Kimberling said.

O'CONNELL TO RUN AGAINST CURLEY FOR SENATE

Developments in the Massachusetts political situation, projected into the limelight by Governor Curley's announcement that he would run for the United States Senate, recorded these outstanding reactions today:

Former Congressman Joseph F. O'Connell doesn't think Curley will run for the Senate, and insists he (O'Connell) is still a candidate.

Senator Marcus A. Coolidge, remaining mum as to his candidacy for re-election at a Fitchburg conclave, was believed ready to withdraw from the fight in favor of a diplomatic appointment from the President.

Robert M. Washburn, who a year ago was Republican candidate for the Senate, may get into the fight this year.

"Now that the senatorial scenery is shifted," he said seriously, "I may yield to that popular wave which seems to be overwhelming everyone and get into the melee myself."

Curley's announcement throws confusion into Republican ranks where the belief holds that the Republican nomination now will not appear so attractive.

O'Connell revealed today that he refuses to accept Governor Curley's announcement. He said he thought that the governor would seek a second term as governor, and in any event declared himself still a candidate for the Democratic nomination for senator.

"Nothing in the governor's speech at Rockland has caused me to change my mind concerning my own candidacy," O'Connell asserted. "As a matter of fact, I make the prediction that he will run for governor again."

Anticipated fireworks at Fitchburg conclave of Worcester County Democrats fizzled when Senator Coolidge failed to reveal his plans in the 1936 campaign.

HOLDS STATEMENT

Declaring that the Coolidges are noted for brevity," Coolidge confined his remarks to the introduction of other speakers, but the feeling prevailed after the powwow that the junior Massachusetts Senator would not seek a second term.

It has been long reported that Coolidge would accept a diplomatic appointment from President Roosevelt, and this report was strengthened today by his refusal to commit himself at Fitchburg.

In the Republican ranks, it appeared likely that there will be fewer candidates than appeared on the political horizon a few weeks ago.

Representative Henry Cabot Lodge of Beverly, an announced candidate for the G. O. P. nomination for the Senate, took issue with Curley's "qualifications" to seek the office, declaring that as Roosevelt's spokesman in this state, he could not very well "serve two masters."

Students Picket Italian Consul

Thirty girl and men students from Harvard, M. I. T. and Radcliffe, bearing aloft placards stating "Intercollegi te Committee Against Fascist War," "War Anywhere Means War Everywhere" and "Stop the Murder Cargoes," picketed the Italian consul's office in Park square building this afternoon for 10 minutes and then mysteriously departed.

To passersby they handed pamphlets, in which America was urged to stop metal and oil shipments to Italy, to send medical aid to Ethiopia and to prevent ports from being the center of "a traffic in death which may take the lives of millions of American youths in vain."

Describing themselves as the "leaders of tomorrow," they asserted they spoke for youth "whose earnest hope is for peace."

'Gift o' God' Fight Lost By Muenches

St. Louis, Dec. 5 (AP)—Rush H. Limbaugh, special commissioner who heard evidence in the "Gift of God" baby case, declared today the infant was the child of Anna Ware, unwed servant girl, and not the son of Mrs. Nellie Tipton Muench, former St. Louis society matron.

Limbaugh's assertion was made in a report to the St. Louis Court of Appeals, recommending the child be returned to Miss Ware. The court will make its decision later.

Miss Ware, 19, sought through habeas corpus action to recover a baby she alleged was born to her in St. Louis August 17 and which, she testified, was being held by Mrs. Muench and her husband, Dr. Ludwig O. Muench, who sought to "palm it off" as their own.

Mrs. Muench, 44, announcing the birth of a son August 18 termed it "a gift from God in my time of distress." She then faced kidnap conspiracy charges of which she subsequently was acquitted.

97 BILLION DEBT CALLED 'SAFE'

Washington, Dec. 5 (US)—Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board, an advocate of government spending, today loomed as one of "the bankers" who told President Roosevelt that the nation could stand a public debt of between 55 and 70 billion dollars.

Eccles declared his opinion that the nation's debt could safely reach 97 billion dollars on the basis of its "normal national income" as compared with Great Britain's public debt and income.

These views of the President's key man in the Federal Reserve System on government spending and the public debt were revealed today out of his testimony before the House banking committee at a hearing on the 1935 banking bill.

MALDEN RATES CUT JAN 1

Joshua T. Daly, general manager of the Malden Electric Company, announced today that, as a result of a series of conferences with the State Department of Public Utilities, the Malden Electric Company will reduce electric rates January 1, as was told in the Boston Evening American yesterday.

This is the second reduction in rates by the Malden company within eight months.

Last April, in cooperation with Governor Curley's committee on public utilities, the company put into effect rates which represented savings of $105,000 annually to its customers.

It is estimated the reduced rates on January 1 will represent additional savings of approximately $100,000.

The new rates will reduce further the charges to the majority of domestic customers and will save a substantial sum to commercial and small power customers, in which classification are included stores, shops, small manufacturing plants and other mercantile establishments.

Revere Priest Near Death in Crash

Framingham, Dec. 5.—Rev. Philip Guerino, D. D., a curate at St. Anthony's Church, Revere, received injuries that may cause his death following an automobile crash today.

Father Guerino, a native of Framingham, during his weekly visit to the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Guerino, of 75 Clinton street, was on the way to pay a visit to a college chum when the accident occurred.

Police said the automobile operated by the priest collided with a machine operated by Arthur York, of Ash street, Waltham.

He was taken to Framingham Union Hospital, where his name was placed on the danger list.

Father Guerino was graduated from the Framingham schools, Boston College and the American College in Rome, Italy.

Court Adjudges Fox in Contempt

Judge Bondy made his decision on motion of Samuel D. Stewart, Jr., counsel for the Capital Company, California corporation, which several months ago entered judgment against Fox for $297,412.81. Stewart complained that Fox had failed to appear for examination, in obedience to a subpoena, in supplementary proceedings.

ROOSEVELT AND CHUM HELD IN AIR PISTOL ATTACKS

tion, Judge Walcott, after hearing the balance of the testimony, held Van Schaak Roosevelt and de Flores, who comes from Pomfret, Ct., for the grand jury in $200 bond.

His finding was "probably cause of assault with a dangerous weapon," and then commented from the bench:

MAKES NEW TEST

Attorney Bartholomew A. Brickley, defense counsel for both youths, opened the cross-examination.

"Would you dare fire one of those pistols into your hand, holding a wadded handkerchief?" he asked Seibolt.

"No."

Brickley then turned toward the spectators and beckoned.

Engineer Louis de Flores, father of one of the defendants, rose from his place in the gallery and strode to the witness stand, standing beside it.

At a word from Attorney Brickley, Seibolt loaded the gun, and handed it to de Flores.

De Flores wadded a handkerchief into his hand, jammed the pistol into the hand and fired.

Then, without the slightest change of expression, he picked the pellet out of the handkerchief and handed it to Judge Walcott.

SHOOTS AGAIN

Said Seibolt:

"That's easy. You held the handkerchief right over the muzzle of the gun. Stand back a bit and let me shoot at the hand."

Seibolt took careful aim and fired.

Again, without comment, De Flores picked the pellet from the balled handkerchief and handed it to the judge.

Seibolt, however, merely repeated his declaration that in his opinion either pistol, which he described as very accurate, could kill at 20 feet if it hit a vulnerable spot.

Then came the incident in which the elder deFlores bared his breast.

VICTIM WITNESS

John J. Barry of Belmont then took the stand.

He testified that on the night of November 20, he had run out of gasoline near the "6 Club" and had gone to get more fuel.

As he was returning, he said, he was struck on the back of the neck by a pellet.

He went to the nearest station of the Metropolitan district police and returned with an officer.

Together they went into the club and found Roosevelt and De Flores, he said, both of whom were on the third floor.

FIRED AT TARGET

Roosevelt, in his own defense, testified that he and De Flores had fired at a target set up in their room.

Later, looking out a window, they saw a man carrying a can, he said, and aimed at the can, firing three shots.

On the last shot the man looked over his shoulder, he said.

When the police arrived, they made no attempt to deny that they had been shooting, Roosevelt said.

OWNED NO GUN

Judge Walcott then interrupted to ask if Roosevelt had ever owned a BB gun.

Roosevelt said, "No."

"Have you ever owned a pea shooter?"

"No."

The younger De Florez then took the stand.

Corroborating Roosevelt's testimony, De Flores said they were not aiming at the man but at his gasoline can.

Before that, he said, they had been shooting at a puddle in a field nearby.

They also shot at an automobile he admitted, which later turned out to be a police cruising car.

Officer Peter Crowe had already testified to pellets striking the cruising car, one striking his knee, and Officer Hugh J. O'Neil testified that after 10 or 12 shots struck the car they traced the marksmen to the "6 Club."

CALLED HARMLESS

The elder De Florez said he was familiar with pistols and he believed the guns might sting at 120 feet, but probably would not cut the flesh.

They had no striking power, he said, and only a low initial velocity.

Attorney Brickley, summing up, called the shooting a most unusual case, in which two intelligent boys had done something which everyone must "condemn."

"In a spirit of playfulness," he said, they did something which should not have done, but not with the intention of harming anyone.

He asked the court to file the case, and not to turn the boys over to the grand jury.

It was then that Judge Walcott said he had no patience with a "spirit of playfulness which might cause the loss of someone's eye."

Leaving Cambridge District Court today after having been held for the grand jury on charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon are Peter De Florez and Cornelius Van Shaack Roosevelt, both students at Technology. They are alleged to have used air pistols to pepper pedestrians passing beneath windows of the exclusive "6 Club" on Memorial drive, Cambridge. Roosevelt is a grandson of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. De Florez is the son of a New York engineer.

GRAND JURORS WEIGH MAINE ERA CHARGES

Augusta, Me., Dec. 5—Federal and state officials joined today in preparation for prosecution in the Kennebec County Superior Court of several former ERA officials on alleged bribery charges.

An order to seek indictments against the former officials was issued by Attorney-General Clyde R. Chapman to County Attorney Francis H. Bates.

The attorney-general's order was issued after several conferences with United States Attorney John D. Clifford and ERA officials in Washington.

When asked about his plans for the prosecution of certain former relief officials, County Attorney Bates stated that the probe centered principally on the alleged solicitation and acceptance of bribes in connection with the huge quantities of merchandise that were purchased by officials.

The county attorney refused to discuss the matter further except to say that other alleged irregularities beyond bribery were to be considered in the grand jury room.

The action in placing the whole matter before the Kennebec County grand jury is really a test case to determine whether the prosecution of any of the charges should be carried out in the State or the federal courts.

County Attorney Bates said that no one at present connected with the ERA offices in the state is involved in his investigation. Anyone whose conduct in office is being probed was in his position previous to last August, the prosecutor said.

FRANCE STARTS 35,000-TON BATTLESHIP

Paris, Dec. 5 (AP)—Possibility that the forthcoming London naval conference might reduce the size of battleships to a maximum of 25,000 tons faded today with the admission by the naval ministry that France has secretly laid the keel of a 35,000-ton war vessel.

The construction of the ship began seven weeks ago, October 22, in the drydock in Brest where the 26,500-ton battleship Dunkerque was launched October 2.

The new battleship, to be called "France," probably will be completed in 1938.

The ministry told the Associated Press that it had informed other powers signatory to the Washington Naval Treaty of the new battleship on the day its keel was laid, but foreign naval attaches here said they had heard nothing about it.

It had been reported that France might be willing to cancel the plan for two 35,000-ton ships if Premier Mussolini agreed to halt the construction of the new Italian battleships of the same size.

The revelation, however, that the French construction has already begun was seen by naval experts as putting an end to Great Britain's hope of reaching an agreement to cut capital ships to 25,000 tons.

Curley Gives Oath To 4 Appointees

Governor Curley today administered the oath of office to four of his new appointees who were yesterday confirmed by the Executive Council.

The four sworn in were Commissioner of Conservation Ernest J. Dean of Chilmark; Civil Service Commissioner Thomas H. Green of Charlestown; Charles F. Conners, chairman of the State Racing Commission, and John L. O'Toole of Bradford, medical examiner of the Fourth Essex District.

MAYOR MOURNS FOR REARDON

Funeral services for Representative Dennis F. Reardon, of 200 Riverway, Roxbury, were attended today by Mayor Mansfield, Major Joseph Timilty of the Governor's staff, Election Commissioner David J. Shaw and other prominent political figures.

The Rev. John Keegan, C. S. S. R., was the celebrant of the solemn high mass at Mission Church in Roxbury. Rev. Joseph Breslin acted as deacon and the Rev. Mark De Coste as sub-deacon.

Pallbearers were City Treasurer John H. Dorsey, Michael H. Looney, Jeremiah Crowley, former president of the St. Alphonsus' Association, Deputy Sheriff John J. Casey, Richard Hickey and Arthur Lennon.

Nazi-Defying Bishop on Trial

Berlin, Dec. 5 (INS)—Dr. Hans Kerrl, Reich church minister, closed in battle with rebellious elements of the confessional synod today when he ordered a disciplinary court trial for Bishop Otto Zaenker of Breslau.

The Protestant clergyman was accused of violating the recent decree forbidding examination of the theological candidates for pastorships without Kerrl's previous consent.

Bishop Zaenker's salary was ordered indefinitely impounded, and the provincial church of Silesia was directed to expel him.

Daniel G. Joy Dies

KING OF CRIME IN N. Y., SAYS PROBER

(In the third article of a series on American crime conditions on the second anniversary of prohibition repeal, Lou Wedemar describes the new "czar" of the underworld, the untouchable "Frank.")

BY LOU WEDEMAR

(Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 5—This city is the quagmire in which crime breeds best. New rackets are born here and spread to other cities. A metropolitan community, with 8,000,000 residents within 20 miles, given the racketeer's perverted "business instinct" full play.

Of course, the disease does 'not stop in the cities. Farmers pay for county or state police, who try to stem the advance into the country. The smallest village bank may be the next victim of a city-organized band of robbers.

Many of the country's 100,000 reported burglary and larceny cases can be traced to some "big town racketeer," or to youths who learned their degenerate trade from him.

"BOSS" OF CRIME

Here is a csd. In New York there lives a man so powerful that his influence from Boston to Miami, to Chicago, to Kansas City, to New Orleans. He is on no published "public enemy" list.

Yet every phase of organized crime east of Kansas City is something he would answer for, if there were a high investigator, a high court before which the rackets of 1935 were tried.

This man is practically all-powerful today.

But his name has never been published. Police will not reveal it; federal agents mention it in whispers. He has never been convicted of a major crime, and so even here his full name cannot be given.

He will be referred to simply by his first name, "Frank." Although he holds no public office he is a powerful force in politics—and crooked as a worm with the bellyache.

"Frank," who by violence has become the supreme authority in organized crime in America, collects his share from every organized racket in the eastern half of the United States.

REAPS MILLIONS

He doesn't get the entire $1,500,000,000 America is contributing to the underworld. His underlings have their "cut," and, although he is rapidly extending his sphere of influence, he doesn't even control half of the total.

Under the guiding genius of "Frank," even this has been "organized." New York is divided into districts, and the rubbish racketeers pay a percentage to a local politician.

Climb right up through the 150 other rackets, with their 1000 ramifications, and go to Park avenue, where live millionaires and society folk.

The most prosperous night clubs serve this trade.

When Mr. and Mrs. Park Avenue go to a night club, they pay tribute to "Frank." For "Frank" controls the hat-check concession, at least, and often much more than that.

Dog Barks Master Out of Jail Cell

Jack refused to leave his master when he was arrested for drunkenness and made such a racket he was admitted to Collins' cell.

When Recorder Kaveny heard of the dog's devotion he told Collins:

"I'm going to heed the dog's plea and parole you in his custody. He's probably able to take better care of you than you can yourself."

Raw Deal Offices Need More Room

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—A possibility that continued expansion of New Deal agencies may force transfer of some offices to nearby cities was suggested today by Secretary Ickes.

He said that in addition to 12,000,000 square feet of space in government owned buildings, the administration is renting another 2,500,000 square feet.

HOPES FOR PEACE BLASTED IN LONDON AND ROME

By International News Service

Europe's hopes for peace, at home and in East Africa, today received two smashing blows.

An Italian Government spokesman in Rome bowled over peace hopes by attacking as unfavorable recent moves for peace, and in so doing intimated the nearly-completed Anglo-French peace formula would be unacceptable to Premier Mussolini.

In London Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare, addressing the House of Commons in a debate on foreign affairs, declared Britain and other League of Nations powers were ready to clamp down an oil embargo upon Italy and to penalize her with other additional sanctions.

Sir Samuel appealed for peace, but made it plain the League machinery designed to halt war would function unimpeded against Italy.

Franco-British Proposal Faces Veto by Mussolini

Rome, Dec. 5 (INS)—The Italian government today semi-officially blasted the recently growing hopes for peace in East Africa and the Mediterranean.

Dashing icy cold water over talks now being held and scheduled for the next few days to try to find a solution to the Italo-Ethiopian war, the government issued a solemn warning against optimism in the current crisis.

Significantly, while Paris and London dispatches carry bright reports that negotiators are nearing an agreement they believe will be acceptable to Premier Mussolini, the warning was given in Italian government circles that settlement of both the Italo-Ethiopian and the Italo-British situations still is far from being an actuality.

The Italian inference was that Il Duce probably will veto the peace proposals now under consideration. Whether they even may be used as a basis for negotiation appeared doubtful in view of the government warning.

In particular, regarding the deliberations of Maurice Peterson, African expert of the British Foreign Office, and Rene Saint Quentin, African expert of the French Foreign Office, an Italian spokesman said:

"Experts are still experts and not negotiators. We know nothing of their work. We have no contact with them."

Thus flatly frowned pessimistically upon the Anglo-French peace plan being concluded with all the diligence available in both Paris and London, and badly shattered hopes that a peace formula would be found before the League of Nations proceeds to further penalize Italy with oil and other sanctions on December 12.

British Warships Leave Gibraltar for Maneuvers

Others of the fleet will go when the first group returns, in movements described officially as the "normal course of fleet exercises" within easy reach of Gibraltar.

Felons Pay Honor To Slain Guard

Windsor, Vt., Dec. 5 (AP)—Two floral pieces, one from his fellow officers and another from the inmates, left state prison today for Richmond where Hervey Burnham, guard slain yesterday, will be buried Saturday.

Burnham, former doorkeeper at the State House, was stabbed to death in the prison hall by Wilfred Pelletier, 17, a prisoner.

Britain Ready to Enforce Oil Embargo, Says Hoare

London, Dec. 5 (INS)—British Foreign Secretary Sir Samuel Hoare announced late today Britain is prepared, with other League of Nations members, to enforce new penalties, including an oil embargo, against Italy.

Sir Samuel made his statement as debate opened in the House of Commons on British foreign policy. He said:

"As to the embargo on oil, as in the whole field of collective action, we are prepared to play our part.

"The League has already agreed to the embargo in principle, and Great Britain has agreed in principle.

"The question still to be decided is whether non-member states would render ineffective the action of member states.

"Further light was recently thrown on this question, with the result it is now possible for the committee of 18 (of the League) to have a further meeting for discussing actual application and the form of the pressure.

"When the meeting takes place, we will be prepared to take our share in whatever collective action is determined."

Sir Samuel asserted the delay in the meeting of the League committee indicated no weakening in the attitude of League although it had given "further opportunity for a peaceful settlement.

"An appeal for peace is no sign of weakness," he said. "It is evidence solely of our desire to end as soon as possible a controversy which is embittering the world.

"There are sufficient difficulties in the world without the added trouble and danger of the Abyssinian dispute.

"There is already too much inflammable material in Europe and the last for fresh powder to be added to it."

Moffett Sees Failure Of League Oil Embargo

Copyright, 1935, by International News Service

London, Dec. 5—American oil companies "owe something to their stockholders," though anxious to co-operate with the neutrality views of the Roosevelt administration, James A. Moffett told International News Service in an exclusive interview today.

Few ships and other reasons Moffett declared he did not believe the League of Nations projected oil embargo against Italy would be effective.

Moffett is vice-president of the Standard Oil Company of California and former United States housing administrator.

"I think Mussolini will patch up the Ethiopian trouble because world prosperity is straight ahead if there is no war," he said.

"America is entering first speed in recovery with lots of buying power. The United States stands for 100 per cent neutrality and keeping out of the European mess.

"Even if American companies stopped shipping oil to Italy, she still would get sufficient supplies elsewhere, including Mexico and Venezuela, and possibly through reshipment from other nations.

"American companies are anxious to co-operate with the neutrality views of the Washington administration, but they owe something to their stockholders and also to their properties in Italy, which might face commandeering."

Monsell to Preside As Parley Opens

London, Dec. 5 (AP)—Viscount Monsell, first lord of the British Admiralty, will preside at the naval conference opening December 9, it was disclosed today.

Sir Samuel Hoare, British Foreign Secretary, will have the title of president, but will be spending a vacation in Switzerland at the time.

The American, French and Italian delegates were scheduled to arrive tomorrow and to call Sunday on Viscount Monsell, the former Sir Bolton M. Eyres-Monsell.

After Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin addresses the opening session, Norman H. Davis, chairman of the American delegation, will move to elect Hoare president and Viscount Monsell as vice-president, it was understood. The French will second the nominations and unanimous approval will follow, it was stated.

Italy will propose A. Holman, of the American section of the British Foreign office, for secretary general, and Japan will second the nomination.

R. I. Suspect Held In Woman's Death

Providence, Dec. 5—Gregoria Di Noi, 45, of Cleveland street, pleaded not guilty to murdering Mrs. Carmella Bruno, mother of four children, when he was arraigned in Sixth District Court today.

Mrs. Bruno was found beaten to death in her home Sunday morning. Di Noi, picked up for questioning by police, admitted he had been her admirer, but denied he had slain her. He admitted he was with her last Saturday night, police said. He was held without bail for trial December 17.

AMOSKEAG MILL WAITS ON UNION

Manchester, N. H., Dec. 5—Reopening of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company Mills, largest in New England, appeared today to be waiting upon a new agreement with union labor.

A major obstacle was removed yesterday when the city promised a substantial reduction, understood to be 40 per cent, in the company's annual tax bill, which this year was $416,000.

Amoskeag officials have before them a new work and wage schedule submitted by the United Textile Workers of America.

Its terms have not been made public but are believed to be substantially the same as were in effect when the mills closed three months ago.

Whether these will be acceptable is view of the tax reduction remains to be seen.

Frederic C. Dumaine, Amoskeag treasurer, earlier stated there would be no reopening unless the mills could operate profitably and peacefully.

The tax reduction, to be effective only if the mills are operating April 1 was declared satisfactory by Dumaine and Mayor Damase Caron.

There is understood to be an agreement that the reduction is dependent upon the employment of 5500 or 6000.

Urge Landon To Speak at G. O. P. Feast

New York, Dec. 5 (US)—Governor Alf M. Landon of Kansas, outstanding G. O. P. presidential nomination possibility, has declined an invitation to speak at the Lincoln Day dinner of the National Republican Club here in February.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, president of the club, who extended the invitation to Governor Landon, said today:

"While declining the invitation because he feared he might not be able to rearrange dates to which he was already committed, the tone of the governor's letter indicated that, if he is able to rearrange these dates, he may be with us for the Lincoln Day dinner."

Colonel Roosevelt said he had received a letter of acceptance from Senator Arthur Vandenberg, of Michigan, who was invited to speak at the dinner with Landon.

Friends of Landon today were writing him, urging him to make every effort possible to be here for the dinner, most important of the year in Eastern Republican circles.

They pointed out that the affair is regarded as the "spring board" to Eastern support for the presidential nomination, and has been so since the club was organized to bring Abraham Lincoln to speak here prior to his nomination.

QUINS LIKE STARRING

Making their first full-length feature film, it had been feared they might be disturbed by the invasion of a small army of movie men into their hospital. But apparently the movie people were more distracted than the five little sisters.

The procedure established in this second day of the filming of "The Country Doctor" was for Director Henry King and his aides to tip-toe into the nursery, set up their equipment quietly and await 18-months-old Yvonne, Cecile, Emilie, Annette and Marie.

Dorothy Peterson, cast as the nurse, had dressed Yvonne and Annette while the first scene was shot—and the film folk paid more attention to the antics of Cecile, Emilie and Marie, sitting in their beds, than they did to business.

Other scenes showed the sisters happy in their play-pens. Miss Peterson, stooping over them, sang a nursery rhyme, and Cecile "played up" by waving her pink arms in time to the song.

Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, impersonated in the picture by Jean Hersholt, was in the nursery during the 30 minutes the movie crew was there yesterday, and said he had satisfied himself that the lights did not harm the eyes of his charges.

Filming will continue daily from 11 a. m. to noon. Barring setbacks, a week will be enough to complete the scenes.

HOPSON INCOME UNDER FIRE

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Chairman O'Connor (Dem.), New York, of the House Rules Committee, today sent a letter to H. C. Hopson, mainspring of the Associated Gas and Electric Company, demanding full information on his income by December 16, and warning that "appropriate action" will be taken if the data is not forthcoming.

Asked what he meant by appropriate action, O'Connor said Hopson could be held in contempt of the House and sent to jail if necessary.

The rules committee is investigating lobbying in connection with the passage last session of the New Deal's utility holding company law.

Found Dead in Stall

INQUEST MAY SEND CONVICTS TO CHAIR

Charges of armed robbery and assault with intent to murder will be brought against the three state prison convicts who survived Tuesday's desperate break which cost three lives, in a new move to send them to the electric chair.

These charges, the first based on the theft of the escape truck, and the second on the brutal beating, administered to Lewis Richards, civilian driver, who was one of the three killed, carry maximum sentences of life imprisonment.

They will be made against Convicts Frank Moriarty, Edward McArdle and Charles C. O'Brien, it was decided in a conference between District Attorney William J. Foley and Medical Examiner William J. Brickley.

INQUEST PLANNED

The district attorney and the medical examiner agreed to allow the cause of Richards' death to be decided by Judge Charles S. Sullivan of Charlestown who will preside at a formal inquest to be held soon.

Parole Board Warned Of Prison Riots

[redacted] members of the State Board of Parole were warned [redacted] officials [redacted] were sitting on dynamite, the Boston Evening American learned today.

The prison and reformatory officials predicted, it was learned, that just some sort of riot or break, such as occurred last Tuesday, would result from the parole board's alleged records and its general set-back of ignoring of convicts' good behavior prisoners.

Since the new system of the parole board was inaugurated last January there has been a marked feeling of unrest in these two institutions, according to the jail officials.

50 PAROLES SET BACK

It was learned that since January approximately 50 inmates of the state prison, usually eligible for parole, have been set back for periods ranging from six months to 14 years as a result of the parole board's tightening of restrictions.

In the same period 135 inmates of Concord Reformatory received set-backs, some of them for as long as two years.

The parole board was told by the prison and reformatory officials, it is understood, that the federal system under which set-backs are made is preferable.

Under this system, a prisoner who seeks pracle and who is set back for a definite period—usually nine months—knows that he has a chance again at the expiration of that time.

A prisoner set back for an indefinite period may have his case come up again any time within 12 months and knows that it will come up at the end of the 12-month period if it has not before.

FLUSH OUT 15 MILES OF KIDNEY TUBES

Medical authorities agree that your kidneys contain 15 MILES of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy.

If you have trouble with too frequent bladder passages with scanty amount causing burning and discomfort, the 15 MILES of kidney tubes may need flushing out. This danger signal may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, rheumatic aches, swelling, puffiness under the eyes and dizziness.

If kidneys don't empty 3 pints a day and so get rid of more than 3 pounds of waste, poisonous matter may develop, causing serious trouble. Don't wait. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, which have been used successfully by millions of people for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help to flush out the 15 MILES of kidney tubes. Invitations For Bermuda Party Are Received

By BETTY ALDEN

EVERYTHING SEEMS TO BE against the socialites who have been trying to convince themselves that they should economize this year and omit their usual trips to the Sunny South, especially to Bermuda . . . One argument which has gone a long way toward convincing those who were on the brink of decision is the sudden arrival of zero weather, and another is that Colonel Walter M. Pratt has sent out invitations for his popular Christmas party, explaining that this year he will not be entertaining in his cozy Boston apartment, but, of all places, in Bermuda!

ROSAMOND MUSGRAVE

Every year Colonel Pratt spends a lot of time thinking up original ideas for his party, and even though this year's invitations are in his inimitable humorous style, the unusual phase of the party occurred purely by accident . . .

The Colonel is going to spend Christmas in Bermuda, and planned the party for December 28 at the Princess Hotel, which he later discovered would not open until the New Year . . . So he had to send out invitations extraordinary to assure his prospective guests that they were still expected, but that the party would convene at the Bermudiana . . .

Even though in previous years, friends of the Colonel have learned to anticipate highly original and lavish parties, they could hardly expect him to furnish a passage to Bermuda . . . But he surprised them all by meeting them half way, as the saying goes, and enclosed with each invitation a photograph of a ticket, which though valueless on board a steamer, went a long way towards convincing his friends that he really wants them to come . . .

A few romantic tidings . . . We have noticed that Mary "Polly" Long and Joe Garrity, Jr., are finding each other's company very congenial . . . and judging by the number of times we have seen them together we should say that Joe, though a husky young Harvardian, is going a long way toward emulating Mary's little lamb . . .

These are busy, exciting days for Rosamond Musgrave, who will be married on the 12th to the lucky lieutenant in the U. S. N. who has won her heart and hand . . . She is having a small wedding at the Marlborough street home of her aunts, Miss Hortense I. and Miss Rosamond Porter, with whom she and her mother make their home . . . After a four-day honeymoon, Lieutenant John Van Nagell, her bridegroom, will have to answer the call of duty and sail with his ship for the West Coast . . . to wait there for Rosamond . . . The bride-to-be is a very popular member of the Junior League and Vincent Club . . .

Musicale Attracts Fashionables

AT THE SECOND CONCERT in this winter's series of the Boston Morning Musicales, held yesterday morning at the Statler, all the subscribers appeared just as excited and enthusiastic about being there as a class of college graduates at their first reunion . . . The audience which listened to a program of songs by Madame Kirsten Flagstad of the Metropolitan Opera Company, was, as usual, filled with important and influential figures of Beacon Hill society who thronged down the aisles after sipping a cup of coffee and visiting around with friends and acquaintances for a pleasant half-hour in the foyer . . .

An army of debutante ushers, arrayed in shiny satin badges of office, showed the results of many careful instructions from their chairman, Miss Elisabeth Lelband, and committed nary a faux pas as they seated such prominent socialites as Mrs. Philip Stockton and her pretty young daughter, Mrs. Charles Francis Adams, Jr., both of whom were dressed in smart black outfits with small turbans and just enough jewelry to be effective . . . Mrs. Andrew Adie, also in black . . . Mrs. George Lyman, Jr., in a sporty outfit of rose wool dress and rose and green coarse plaid coat . . . Mrs. Francis W. Bird of East Walpole, Mrs. George Saltonstall West, Mrs. Paul Clark and Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, who has moved up to town away from the beloved Myopia Country, for the cold months . . . Mrs. Leroy Stott of Franklin, was with her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Martin, 2d, of Cambridge, who lent a very musically attuned ear to the performance of Madame Flagstad . . .

Mrs. Martin's cousin, Mrs. George Stewart Sanders, was there, urging all her friends to drive out to Milton to see the nice old house she and her bridegroom have taken . . . This bride is the former Harriet Hayward, who was married in London under the wing of her sister, Mary Elisabeth de Bruyne . . .

Others at the musicale included Mrs. Stedman Buttrick, Jr., one of the younger members of the committee, wearing an all black outfit with a tiny Peter Pan turban on her boyish haircut . . . Mrs. Albert Kales, Mrs. T. Barnet Plimpton in a colorful outfit of ruby red and gold metal cloth with a becoming shovel brim hat . . . Mrs. Charles T Gilbert, reminding everybody that she spends Tuesday at the Thrift Shop and loves to welcome shoppers and even "lookers" . . .

Mrs. Gilbert and Mrs. William Emerson Barrett prolonged the morning's fun through the luncheon hour while they munched salad and ices in the Statler dining room. Mrs. Wilfred Smith, Mrs. Frank Stewart and her daughter, Mrs. Lawrence Black, had the same bright idea about lunching at the Statler before dashing out in the cold to keep afternoon engagements . . .

Somerset Ball

Esther Binney Honored

THE REV. AND MRS. JAMES HOLLAND BEAL, the former Georgette Binney, are giving a ball at the Hotel Somerset this evening in honor of Mrs. Beal's debutante sister, Miss Esther H. Binney.

The dinner table has been decorated with pink roses and white gardenias, and Miss Binney is planning to wear a dress of ivory satin with a cape of the same material fastened at the shoulders with pearl clips. A silver filet in her hair and silver slippers will add sparkle to the costume. Later at the ball she will carry a bouquet of white camellias tied with silver ribbon.

Pink Taffeta

Mrs. Beal will wear a gown of pink taffeta and will also carry a bouquet of white camellias, while Miss Susan Binney, the debutante's post-deb sister, will wear a gown of white and carry pink flowers.

In addition to the thirty-odd ushers places will be set for Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Whiteside, Mr. and Mrs. Willis F. Beal, Miss Nancy Wellington, Miss Frederica Sargent, Miss Elizabeth Wentworth, Miss Blanche O'Riorden, Miss Katherine Day, Miss Louise Ranney, Miss Miriam Little, Miss Constance Matless, Miss Helen Lang, Miss Frances Osgood, Miss Priscilla Thorndike, Miss Louise Herman, Miss Reinette Plimpton, Miss Eugenia Grew, Miss Martha Billings, and Miss Yolande de Moudiut of Washington, D. C., Miss Pheobe Cook, daughter of Governor Cook of the Hawaiian Islands, who was one of Miss Binney's classmates at the Westover school, and Mrs. Howard Gill of New York, the debutante's great-aunt, who are the Binney's house guests.

Among the guests who later will go on to the ball are Miss Nancy Richards of Groton, Mr. Adams Carter of Newtonville, and Mr Charles R. L. Sturgis of Milton.

Greens Are Hosts

Another debutante, Miss Lois Tanner Green, who made her debut last Saturday, is being honored at a dinner party which her parents, Judge and Mrs. Louis Lawrence Green, are giving at their home in Cambridge.

Among the guests at this party will be Miss Barbara Hale, debutante daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Worth Hale of Wellesley; Miss Virginia Faxon, another Cambridge debutante; Mark H. Hall of Brookline, Richard E. Bennick of Cambridge, Augustus H. Haffenreffer, Jr., of Boston, and Lieutenant Richard K. Anderson.

ROOSEVELT SET TO LAUNCH HIS DRIVE JAN. 8

Washington, Dec. 5 (INS)—President Roosevelt's campaign for re-election will be opened with more or less formality during the second week in January.

The Democratic national committee will assemble here on January 7 to select a convention city, and on the 18th it is planned to stage a Jackson Day dinner at which Mr. Roosevelt will be the chief speaker. The guest list will be a veritable Who's Who in the party.

About that time, too, or soon thereafter, James A. Farley intends to resign as postmaster-general in order to devote his entire time to the '36 campaign. Those who have been gunning for the bald, genial New Yorker to relinquish either his cabinet post or the chairmanship of the national committee will be appeased.

With President Roosevelt's renomination considered assured, the national committee will be faced with three principal matters during its meeting.

First, the selection of a convention city, which probably will go to the highest bidder, with Philadelphia, Atlantic City and Chicago expected to be the principal contestants.

Second, the pressing question of party finances and how to finance the campaign.

Third, whether anything is to be done about the abrogation of the time-honored two-thirds nominating rule, which has disrupted several national conventions in the past, and which for a time threatened Mr. Roosevelt's nomination at Chicago in 1932.

Georgians Report to Roosevelt

Warm Springs, Ga., Dec. 5 (INS)—An estimate of the southern political situation as it is complicated by Governor Eugene Talmadge, of Georgia, was to be laid before President Roosevelt today by administration advisers from the Georgia State.

Senators Walter F George and Richard B. Russell, Jr., Georgia NEC Director Erle Cooke and State RFC Counsel Edgar Dunlap had been invited to the White House. They were bringing with them a report on Georgia's reaction to the President's Atlanta speech.

TALMADGE PLANS REPLY

Today's conference took on additional significance because tomorrow Governor Talmadge is going on the air over a national hook-up with "Georgia's answer to Roosevelt."

It is known that the governor is going to tear into the administration again, because he already has done excerpts of his speech for the newsreels and they are far from complimentary to the President.

"Does the President think the American people are asleep or dopes?" Talmadge will inquire as he takes issue with nearly everything Mr. Roosevelt said last Friday.

National Democratic leaders profess to be not concerned over the activities of the Georgian, who is offering himself as successor to the late Huey Long as a rallying point for anti-Roosevelt sentiment in Dixie.

SNUB TO PRESIDENT

Nevertheless they want to considerable pains to stage the Atlanta rally—only to have Talmadge pointedly snub the President at the last minute by failing to show up.

Administration men in this state insist that Georgia will spank Talmadge soundly if he elects to call a presidential primary and put himself up against the President next year.

The afternoon, over the long-distance telephone, the President was to make a short speech in connection with dedication of the new foundation to the blind in New York city.

Fliers Enter Jungle Seeking Redfern

Georgetown, British Guiana, Dec. 5 (AP)—A rescue expedition was headed toward the Dutch Guiana jungles today in search of Paul Redfern, United States flier who disappeared on a flight eight years ago.

Art Williams and Art Wendt took off from here yesterday in a flying boat for Paramaribo, Dutch Guiana, where they hoped to pick up an Indian guide who claimed to have met Redfern in the jungle.

The Forgotten Woman

Oakland, Cal., Dec. 5 (AP)—"I married somebody in your town five years ago," Russell E. Girard, 28, Los Angeles broker, wrote County Clerk G. E. Wade. "Now I want to get a divorce and I can't recall her name. All I know about it is that marriage license number is 58,385."

The clerk found the girl's name was Pauline Fountaine, San Francisco.

CURLEY SLOGAN ENTRY

Governor Joins in Vets' Contest

Governor Curley today became the first purchaser of an entry ticket in the $75,000 Grand National Slogan Contest being sponsored by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The proceeds of the contest will benefit an American charity, the V. F. W. National Home at Eaton Rapids, Mich. The contest has the official sanction of the United States postal authorities.

Governor Curley declared: "It is high time American dollars that have been going out of the country for foreign lotteries and sweepstakes be kept at home for American charities.

"Hospitals and other philanthropies here should benefit."

The prizes in the contest range from $50,000 to $100. The closing date for the entries is March 15, 1936. Awards will be announced March 27.

The Eaton Rapids Home accommodates more than 150 boys and girls, who attend public school, go to a church of their own choosing, and take special instruction in a trade or profession. The Home also has its own gymnasium, library, and medical center.

I WANT YOU ONLY

By Elenore Meherin

CHAPTER 22

There were dear, encouraging, hungry letters from Ricky. At Christmas he sent her perfume. He knew she loved it. He sent her a green silk kimono and slippers to match.

He wrote: "You'll say I'm extravagant dear. And that we can't afford luxuries. I've not taken my pay-checks for these. I got a chance to work nights and earn this little Christmas present for my sweet.

"Wish I could see you in the kimono: hold you in my arms an con or two. Never let go. It's freezing here. I walk along the streets, seeing the lighted trees through windows. And wish that I had a little hand tucked in my arm, your white dear face at my shoulder. I wonder if you've still that shine about your eyes and your mouth so warm and red"

Her longing made a bridge to him and over this, a thousand times that Christmas Day, her eager, aching thoughts went flying.

The Winter set in with incisive cold. Toward the end of January, now came in a glorious, extravagant pageant. The skies opened million fantastic white blossoms floated downward.

The wind blew them in eddying series. Wind danced with them through a gray, rhythmic quiet. It over the city went a melancholy poetic stillness of the snow.

Nell Was Glad

Nell hugged her worn, lapin coat about her and tried to keep out the freezing blast. The chill of it cut into her bones.

It wrapped like an icy sheet about her knees. Her ears were raw and aching. She could have cried. Yet she was happy. She was prayerfully glad.

In her pocket was a letter from Ricky. His second month finished. For the second time he sent her $30.

This was too much. This let him only $45 for his own living and expenses. But he wanted to clear the debt to Emily; wanted to get by on his own.

He wrote: "I've a hunch, my sweetheart, that the stars were out when you were born. You've been lucky for me. You'll be lucky for yourself. Bless you, dearest, and keep a high heart."

He was right! God would be good to her. She stood before her mirror and critically surveyed her figure. No one could guess. Not a soul yet knew. Her job would last. And they'd get by—oh triumphantly!

This trusting young hope made the blow more crushing when it fell.

The doctor was a stern young man with aggressive jaw and quiet speech. He was appalled that Mom had been neglected. He wanted to send her to a hospital. Save Mom's life.

Mom said: "No! I'm staying here."

"Is she very sick?" Nell asked frightened.

Doctor Guesses

The doctor called four days in succession. He said to Nell: "Isn't there some one who can relieve you with her care? After eight hours in an office, the atmosphere in that room is none too good for you. When do you expect your child?"

Nell straightened with a visible shock. He added hastily: "I beg your pardon. I had that impression."

She leaned against the closed door of the small front room. She fought desperately for calm: "You're right—of course. Is it this apparent? Do you think everyone knows I am to have a child?"

"It is necessary for you to keep it hidden?"

"Yes. I've got to hold my job. That's all the money we have."

She was utterly staggered because the doctor had perceived she was to have a child. She lay awake half the night and was a little white wreck when she arrived at the office next day.

In the dressing room Sigrid Karen put her arm around Nell. She said gently: "You look awfully drawn and tired. Something troubling you, Nell?"

"Why no! I feel simply fine."

"Really Nell? Then I'm glad!" A little thing like that made her uneasy and suspicious. Another day Mildred Martin said to her: "I don't see you in my neighborhood any more. Did you and Dick come to the parting of the ways."

Nell looked at her astonished. Mildred went on evenly, challengingly: "Didn't you know I lived in the apartment across the street" I used to see you two over the week-ends "

Nell feared she would faint

About two weeks later—a day of splendor and sunshine at the end of February, Nell was called into the office of Miss Kinsell. Miss Kinsell was in charge of the stenographic staff.

Nell came out from that interview with her hope withered and her pride in shreds

Miss Kinsell went on talked about the heavy losses the company had taken in the collapse of the Grenville Indemnity company

And finally: "We're forced to cut expenses. You've given excellent service, Miss Doran, but your salary is out of line. We can get plenty of competent girls for much less."

Miss Kinsell went on unperturbed: "I'm giving you a high recommendation"

"Am I losing my job? You've heard I was married"

"Oh, Are You?"

"Married? , are you?" with a sharp rising intonation, "I hadn't heard the marriage angle discussed."

The blood fell away from Nell's brain. She felt reeling. Instinctively, childishly, she reached for her ring, hanging by a fine chain about her neck

She read the inscription aloud "May 10, 1934. I didn't dare to tell it. I simply CAN'T lose my job. My family depend on me"

"You know it is the rule in this office that a girl must leave when she marries. If it was so necessary for you to keep your job, could you not have refrained from marriage?"

Nell looked at the efficient, sharp-nosed Miss Kinsell. She had refrained from marriage. A good thirty years, perhaps.

"And certainly Miss Doran—or what is the name"—you can't possibly expect to keep on with your work when you are so obviously about to have a child."

Nell leaned across the table, her dark eyes smouldering in an ashen face: "So you've all been talking about me? I'm sorry! I didn't think it was this obvious"

Miss Kinsell raised her brows in a quiet superior way. "You did your best to slip things over on us."

"Oh, no! I haven't thought I was so smart. My husband—the name is Richard Calhoun. Our license is on record as is also the marriage ceremony in the Church of St. Luke—my husband does not earn enough as yet. He will! I must remain at work a few months more. Can you not permit this? My mother is dying."

"Well, Miss Doran—or pardon me, Mrs. Calhoun, you have chosen to flout the rules. Do you think I can now give you special privileges? The staff would be demoralized in no time. You are owed two weeks' pay. I'm giving you, in addition, a full month's salary. This is all I can do."

Nell stared at the woman in a goaded, bereft way

Miss Kinsell went on: "I am sorry for your misfortune. But one might suppose, in these desperate times, you would think twice before bringing another hungry mouth into the world to fill."

Nell got to her feet. She spoke softly across a blazing quiet. "It is no misfortune, in my opinion, but a privilege and a joy to bear a child. And it shall not be hungry! Despite your disapproval, I am exceedingly glad about it all."

"A very worthy attitude. I'm sure. Please believe I wish you well."

DICKY PROMISES MADGE A SURPRISE

CHAPTER 515

"HE ESPECIALLY wishes Sam Brixton to be present?" I repeated slowly when my husband had finished telling me of Lee Chow's plans for the ceremonial opening of the envelopes contained in the lockbox left to Marion by her grandmother.

Dicky's eyes held quizzical wonderment as they met mine.

"The plot thickens," he said lightly, then added more thoughtfully

"I have a hunch that we'll have a bit of draw-mah—and I don't mean maybe—when those envelopes are opened. All the evidence points to the conclusion that both Sam Brixton and Lee Chow have a pretty accurate idea of what those envelopes contain. It's easy enough, I suppose, to dope out Sam Brixton's knowledge and interest—"

He paused and looked uncertainly at me as if asking for support of his theory.

"The fact that he and Marion's father, Tom Morton, were business associates in the time preceding Morton's death, would explain his interest in a mysterious legacy left to Marion," I said slowly. "He must believe there is something in that box to which, rightfully or fraudulently, he can make claim."

"Fraudulently' is the word," Dickey commented tersely. "I don't believe that slippery eel—that's tautology, but I need it—could claim anything rightfully. But I'm sure you have the correct dope on the reason he's so anxious to see what's inside the box

"The really difficult task," he went on meditatively, "is to figure out where Lee Chow comes in. He's in, of course, with both feet—pipe that poisoned dart episode—but how did he get next to the existence of that box? Say! Here's a thought! Did Lil ever know Lee Chow before he turned up that time with old Hugh?"

"I'm sure not," I said. "At least she never has said that she ever saw him before or betrayed the least recognition of him. For that reason—"

I hesitated, and Dicky finished my sentence for me.

"For that reason you can't put that particular question to her," he said, "looks to me as if we'd simply have to possess our respective souls in patience until the night of the party. Lee Chow's edict makes it unnecessary for you to worry about Lil's having to fing the Brixtons. Is there anything else on your mind?"

"Just one thing," I said. "When I'm—"

"Functioning as one of the Missus Fixit twins?" Dicky gibed with a good-natured grin.

"That probably as good as any other description," I said, grinning back at him, albeit with a distinct effort. "But I always try as much as possible to keep Sam Brixton away from Lillian, and especially from Harry, who loathes him. Harriet says I mustn't exert myself either in mind or body—I think my role, as far as I can understand it, is to be a jelly fish, so—"

"Poor little spineless creature," he mocked. "Does she hate her role? But she's got to play it, nevertheless, and here's where her big, usually useless husband is going to come in handy.

MADGE SATISFIED

"Neither Harry nor Lillian will have to worry their heads about that bird. And if he starts to pull anything that isn't in the code, why, it will be just too bad for Sammy, that's all. Does that satisfy you?"

"It surely ought to," I told him, smiling with no effort this time, "and it does."

"Then," he bent his head to mine, "now that the affairs of the world are all settled, suppose you rest for a while I have a scheme—you just wait—if you're a good girl and take a nap, I may have a surprise-surprise for you—it's darned queer if a brother can't stand in with an older sister once in a while if she is playing a starchy trained nurse. So long, honey, and go to sleep."

His grin was cryptic as he kissed me and went out of the room. I lay relaxed pleasantly against my pillows, and speculated lazily upon what his "surprise" might be, until I drifted off to slumber. When I awoke, I found that a big screen had been placed in front of my bed, and that upon the other side were stealthy, noiseless movements

"I'm wide awake," I called cheerfully. "What's going on?"

Comic Characters in Toyland

The comic strips have had their effect on toyland. Skippy being a favorite character doll, and Popeye, complete with his basket of spinach, a close second.

Then to illustrate the influence of the movies, there is the Anne Shirley doll, with red pigtails, the Shirley Temple doll, with curls and dimples—and even the pickaninny of the "Our Gang" comedies.

Keep Blood in Normal State

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.

"Would you tell me a good blood medicine . . . something that would clear and purify the blood? I am not sick but would like to give my blood a good cleansing. I think this should be done once a year." This paragraph is taken from a letter written by one of my readers.

It is not unusual for me to receive such requests. Many persons believe the original supply of blood continues in the body. In reality the blood which circulates through the blood vessels is being constantly renewed by new blood cells.

The blood corpuscles, as well as the "hemoglobin" or coloring matter of the blood, are formed in the marrow of the long bones, as well as in the liver and spleen.

Anemia may be of a mild or a severe form. Simple anemia usually responds to rest, diet, an abundance of fresh air and sunlight, and other hygienic measures.

Anemia may follow infection This type of anemia is usually associated with jaundice and discoloration of the skin It must not be confused with pernicious anemia which is a much more serious disease. Often anemia is encountered in young girls who are deprived of adequate amounts of fresh air, and sunlight and as well as sleep.

The diet should contain foods rich in minerals and vitamins so necessary for the maintenance of good health. Iron is a mineral especially needed in making healthy red blood cells and is found in abundance in green leafy vegetables, beans, eggs, cheese, meat, spinach, beet tops, carrots, onions, lentils, cabbage, tomatoes, limes, grapes, strawberries and nuts, are only a few of the many foods which supply important minerals and blood-building elements.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

The Story Of a Christmas Cake

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

EVERY Christmas for the past six years this column has offered, to any reader who would send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, a recipe for "Poor Man's Christmas Cake."

This not-so-rich but delicious fruit cake can be made at a cost somewhere in the neighborhood of 10 cents a pound; 12, if you plunge on citron, candied lemon peal or a handful of walnuts, either English or black.

More than 15,000 of these recipes have been mailed to readers, and some of the answers they have brought, telling of the results of making this cake, have been interesting, amusing, romantic—even tragic, when the cake hasn't been a success!

A girl with serious intentions toward a boy friend, who was a little slow in coming across, tried out the recipe with him. Together, they took turns watching the cake as it baked. It was so successful that they decided to try life's greatest experiment together, and three months later the young lady sent me her wedding cards.

TOUCHING TRIBUTE

If we weren't so desperately afraid of being considered sentimental these days, I would say that the most touching letter I ever received about this cake read: "Mother used to make the children a Christmas cake and she always let them help. This year there is no mother to make things happy for the children. She was buried last week. I saw your offer of a recipe for making 'Poor Man's Fruit Cake' and I am going to try my hand at it. The children say that to smell the cake baking is as good as eating it." I always wondered how that cake turned out.

A lady in Texas took orders for this cake and made enough money for her summer vacation.

One young bride wrote that she had her first married spat about it. In an attempt to be humorous, her young husband said he wouldn't trust himself on the ferry boat after having had a double helping. This was his idea of humor, but not the bride's.

The offer of the recipe for this cake still holds good. I will send it to anyone who requests it, enclosing a stamped and self-addressed envelope, with my best wishes for a Happy Christmas.

When it comes to celebrating Christmas Washington, D. C., is the real melting pot, since so many people from older countries have their homes in the nation's capital — embassies, legations, translators in government offices and Americans in the making. When Christmas comes, they all seem to revert to the customs, food and folkways of the lands of their birth.

Even in the White House, the President manages to reproduce much of the old Hyde Park days that he remembers as a boy. While he will gladly turn the switch which will light the Community Christmas tree, the family tree in the White House upstairs in the wide hall outside hi sstudy, must be illuminated with wax tapers. The Christmas smell, to him, means the burning of wax and the log fire burning on his bedroom hearth, before the grandchildren come in to see what Santa Claus has brought them.

ENGLISH FEAST

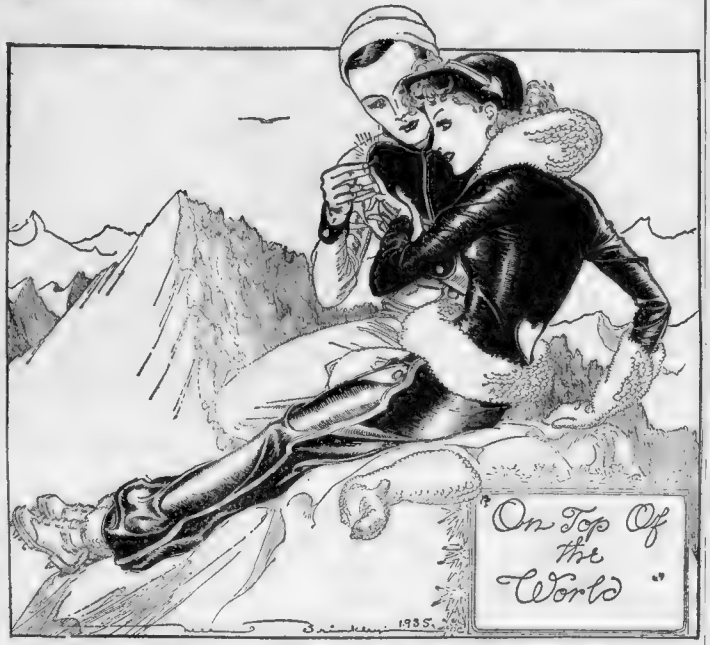
At the British Embassy the charming chatelaine is an American, and it wouldn't be Christmas without turkey stuffed with chestnuts; but the Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay, must have his roast beef and plum pudding, which is the Christmas feast of the English king.

Old Washingtonians who used to go to the Russian Embassy during the Czarist regime, when Bakmetieff was Ambassador, recall the huge boar's head which crowned the feast—a characteristically Russian as the enormous Cossack, with scimitar thrust in his belt, who used to drive the Ambassador's droshky.

The "Poor Man's Fruit Cake" may not be as rich as some Christmas delicacies, but it's fun to make, and the delicious, spicy odor it sends through the house will recall to older members of the family the days when our Christmas cakes were made at home.

The Giving of the Ring

By NELL BRINKLEY



MAYBE it does actually happen on top of the world, the giving of that ring that outsparkles the stars; in lonely air, where not even a far whisper of the noisy world rises to disturb

And maybe it doesn't—but it might just as well. For a girl and man feel then as though they were in that remote spot alone. Maybe it happens over a rose-shaded table, across glossy linen, with an orchestra playing "In a Luxenburg Garden." Maybe in the family living-room, with the family perilously and suddenly liable to intrude any moment—for they are just around the corner of the door. Maybe in the front seat of a toy roadster, under the park trees.

But wherever it happens, they are alone.

By NELL BRINKLEY.

Mrs. Beeckman on Good Manners

SORORITY PIN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. Is it proper to wear a class pin or sorority pin with formal clothes?

2. In the event that a young lady is a college graduate, and also a member of a sorority, is it proper to wear the class pin and the sorority pin at the same time?

B.

1. A class pin or a sorority pin is not considered a formal necessary, and therefore would not be proper or appropriate to wear with formal attire.

2. Wearing both a class pin and a sorority pin at the same time seems a bit over-doing "pin decorations" . . . don't you think so? Better to wear one at a time.

DIVORCEE'S NAME

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have just been granted my divorce and the right to resume my maiden name. Now, am I to be known as Miss Vera Brown of Mrs. Vera Brown . . . Brown being my maiden name?

Reader.

When a divorced woman resumes her maiden name she customarily resumes the Miss also . . . Miss Vera Brown

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on good manners submitted by readers.)

Adjustable Slip

New Wrap-Around Version

MARIAN MARTIN
PATTERN 9665

A wrap-around slip that's adjustable is just about the wisest investment any woman could make, especially if her budget is limited—her measurement difficult.

Made with a deep lap in back, it's fastened there with a single button, and should you lose a few pounds in the months to come, simply set the button over a bit, and you've proven the practicality of the adjustable feature.

Don't you like the idea of a built-up bodice, for a change? You'll surely approve of shoulder-straps that can't slip, too, and a deeply cut V line in back which allows the slip to be worn with a low-backed frock.

Pattern 9665 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 16 requires 3 yards 39-inch fabric.

Send 15 cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number and size of each pattern.

The new Marian Martin pattern book will be ready for mailing December 15. Place your order now, and be among the first to receive a copy.

It's a practical pattern book that interprets spring's newest fashions in thrifty, easy-to-make clothes for the whole family!

New Paste Assures Sparkle

By ARLINE GOULD

IF YOUR TEETH are not as white and sparkling as you would like to have them, there's a new tooth-paste that will do wonders in the way of brightness.

It's a French dentifrice and the only kind we know that instantly gives your molars a pearly whiteness and beautiful dentition.

It is as perfect a cleanser as we have ever found—delightful to taste and lovely to use. It is scented with anisette (of all things), and leaves your mouth cool, clean and refreshed. The odor of tobacco is banished as by magic.

This toothpaste has been used for years in France by fastidious men and women. It is based on a scientific and efficient formula and until only recently was found exclusively on the continent.

In their quest of the beautiful, a famous Fifth avenue house was the first to "discover" it and import it to this country. In spite of its rich backgr.und and unequalled efficiency, its price is most reasonable. A generous sized tube costs but slightly over 30 cents

Not only is this toothpaste unique in taste and achievement, but its color is radically different from domestic products. Almost blood-colored in appearance, it spreads with a creamy softness on the brush, and slowly turns a roseate pink on the teeth. Gums are given a healthy, pink luster, and teeth are left incredibly clean and white.

No matter how much time and money you spend in keeping your skin lovely, your hair well-groomed and your hands beautifully manicured, you can make no real claim to beauty unless your teeth are white and sparkling.

To learn the name of this new toothpaste which is scented with anisette call Arline Gould, Liberty 4000, or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to her at the Boston Evening American.

Fashion Flashes

A NEW cape-and-dress daytime ensemble has a one-piece frock of black sheer woolen, pleated from neck to hem, including the sleeves. The pleats of the bodice are held in place by horizontal stitching. Those of the skirt fall straight and slim to a deep ruffle around the bottom.

With it is worn a military cape, seven-eighths length, with high collar, square shoulders, and a lining of vivid red, black and white plaid.

THE "GUF," pronounced "GOOF," represents the latest brainstorm of the hat designers. It is a felt cap with a brim turned up snugly around the crown in back, extended into a long pointed visor in front, and it's one of the most dashing bits that has come down the pike.

The Guf conceals the right eye entirely, and it's peaked visor could well be used as a weapon of defense. It has a round, well-fitted crown, a wide grosgrain band, and the visor section is curled up on the edges.

A YOUNG Italian designer, was inspired to do a Macaroni print called "Pastine," and also a white lozenge pattern on deep violet. For cruise costumes there is a white flying fish print on a bright silk ground.

Beauty Answers

Question — Can anything be done to make eyebrows grow in again? Mine were destroyed through burns a short time ago and I have been using a pencil ever since. However, the effect is not natural and I am very discouraged. My eyelashes seem also to be weak and are not nearly as heavy as they used to be.

Marion M., Boston.

Answer—When eyebrows are destroyed through burns or other accidents, they can be restored. Grafts are taken from the scalp, transplanted, and serve very agreeably as understudies. But they have to be clipped often. There is an excellent eyelash grower and darkener on the market. If you will send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope I will be glad to give you the name of this product. It is inexpensive.

Bridge

A Lucky Hand

Holding almost every high honor in the deck, it is sometimes difficult for partners to avoid reaching a slam contract that, on double-dummy analysis, offers a very poor chance of success.

This was the case in a hand played in the recent Vanderbilt club tournament. North and South, as shown in the diagram, held all four Aces, three Kings, two Queens, and two Jacks—usually ample for twelve tricks.

But their poor distribution made the contract seem hopeless. There was, however, one slim chance, and the declarer promptly grasped it.

North, dealer.
North-South vulnerable

	♠AK75 ♡A1097 ◇A10 ♣A106
♠96 ♡KQ ◇98642 ♣Q742	North West East South	♠A3 ♡1842 ◇753 ♣J953
	♠QJ1042 ♡653 ◇KQJ ♣K8

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♠	Pass	3♠	Pass
4NT	Pass	5♠	Pass
5NT	Pass	6♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

North's bidding was perhaps a shade optimistic, but his five honor-tricks led him to believe his partner must have good distribution for his jump-bid. East opened the diamond five and South won the trick. Two rounds of spades accounted for the adverse trumps, and North played all the clubs and diamonds from the North and South hands. Praying for a miracle, declarer then led the Ace and a low heart, and his prayer was answered. West held the King-Queen alone, and had to take the second heart trick and lead a diamond or a club, either of which could be ruffed by North while dummy discarded the last losing heart. Thus only one heart trick was lost and the slam contract fulfilled.

New And Delicious Ways To Serve Sauerkraut

Four Tasty Non-Meat Dishes

By MARTHA LEE

A GOOD many housewives think of sauerkraut exclusively in connection with meat. As a matter of actual fact, sauerkraut is just as tasty and satisfying with a great variety of non-matter companions.

For centuries this healthful product has enjoyed great popularity, either in itself or in combination with vegetables, eggs, nuts, flour and other like ingredients

SMOTHERED SAUERKRAUT

4 cups sauerkraut
4 medium-sized onions
4 tbsp. flour
1 tbsp. syrup
½ tbsp. mustard
¼ tsp. paprika
½ cup water
¼ cup lemon juice
2 tbsps. meat drippings or other fat

Slice the onions very thin and add to sauerkraut. Add flour, mustard and paprika to fat, brown well. Add water and syrup and cook until thickened. Remove from fire and add lemon juice. Pour over sauerkraut and onions and let stand one-half hour before serving.

EGGPLANT A LA SAUERKRAUT

1 eggplant
1 cup sauerkraut
½ cup bread crumbs
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tps. pepper
3 tbsps. fat
1 tbsp. onion

Cook the egg plant in boiling water 15 minutes. Cut a slice from the top, remove the pulp carefully and to it add the sauerkraut, bread crumbs, onion, salt and pepper. Melt the fat, add the sauerkraut and bread crumb mixture, stir well and refill the egg plant shell. Bake in a hot oven 10 minutes.

ESCALLOPED SAUERKRAUT WITH CHEESE

2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
2 cups milk
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. paprika
2 cups sauerkraut
1 cup grated cheese
½ cup buttered crumbs

Make a white sauce by melting butter, adding flour and then milk. Allow to boil and then add seasoning. Spread a layer of half of the white sauce, then add a layer of half the grated cheese. Make a second layer of sauerkraut, sauce and cheese; cover the top with a layer of buttered crumbs and place in the oven. When the sauce bubbles through the crumbs, it is done. Serve hot in the baking dish.

SAUERKRAUT SAUSAGE

Cook one pound of sauerkraut with a little water for about a half-hour until quite dry. Take a finely cut onion which has been browned in fat, and add to the sauerkraut, steaming the entire mixture to dryness. Let it stand until it cools. Beat two eggs with flour and salt, and add 2 to 3 large grated potatoes. Roll this [illegible] the sauerkraut into small sausages about a finger-length and then sprinkle with or roll in flour. Place the sausage in a pan and cook to a golden yellow.

TAXPAYERS, OFFICIALS OPEN ATTACK ON HIGH LEVIES

Waste and extravagance in federal and state government came under taxpayers' and officials' heavy guns today as a state-wide drive was launched for lower taxes.

As part of the drive, voters throughout Massachusetts were urged by the Boston Real Estate Exchange directorate to take their grievances personally to their senators and representatives.

Tomorrow night, in the Roslindale Municipal Building, the Real Estate Owners' and Tenants' League of Boston will hold a mass meeting in protest of high taxes and to demand an itemized governmental budget.

Speakers will include Eric A Nelson, League president; Ker Payne, New England director of the National Economy League and John F Mahoney, director of the Worcester Taxpayers Association

MEET DEC 12

Inspired by protests against the proposed $17,000,000 state tax program, the Massachusetts Federation of Taxpayers Associations will meet December 12 at Worcester in another move for reducing governmental costs.

At Washington today Congressman Richard B. Wigglesworth of Milton, Republican member of the House Appropriations Committee demanded federal expenditures be reduced.

Expenditures of the Federal Government for the first three years of the "New Deal" administration, Wigglesworth charged, are the largest reached by any nation in peace time.

DOUBTFUL ITEMS

"This record," he said, "includes appropriations amounting to over $24,000,000,000, not including contingent obligations amounting to $9,500,000,000 and other doubtful items.

"It is reflected in deficits aggregating over $10,000,000,000 and in a public debt of over $30,000,000,000, with further and substantial increase in immediate prospect.

"It is a record made in spite of the assurance given three years ago that federal expenditures would be reduced to the extent of 25 per cent.

"If recovery is to be achieved, if employment is to be provided for the millions of men and women now unemployed, if there is to be eliminated an increase in the cost of living which will be intolerable, it is essential to return to a fiscal policy which is sound."

Treasury Loan Oversubscribed

Washington, Dec. 5 (AP)—Secretary Morgenthau said today final figures showed a five times oversubscription to the Treasury's December offering of $900,000,000 in new securities.

He said $4,520,000,000 had been subscribed.

Champion Steer Sells for $3195

'Fagin' Case Verdict Waited

Nelson S. Clark, 1915 candidate for Governor in Massachusetts and alleged "Fagin," was expected to know his fate today in the court of general sessions, New York city where he is on trial.

The Clark defense was closed today, his counsel producing a number of documents in declared support of an allegation that Clark was subjected to intimidation in the district attorney's office.

Clark, charged with being a "fence" for four youths who are condemned to die next month in the electric chair at Sing Sing for the holdup slaying of a policeman denied yesterday he plotted any of the robberies the youths committed.

Clark, 63-year-old former financier and manufacturing chemist, told the court and the jury that he had no knowledge of their acts.

"I was a soldier in the World War," testified Clark. "I ran for Governor of Massachusetts on the Progressive ticket in 1915. I organized the Clark Chemical Company in California in 1911, and invested $500,000. There I met Mr. Olney. He was friendless and lonely. I gave him a job as handyman.

"He lived with me. We traveled together. We came to New York. Here I met the other boys. I tried to be a father to them."

LIVERMORE BOY BARS VISITORS

Santa Barbara, Cal., Dec. 5 (AP)—District Attorney Percy Heckendorf deferred today to the wish of Jesse Livermore, Jr., to be left alone, and turned his attention to D. B. Neville, a house guest, when the 16-year-old son of the Wall street trader was shot on Thanksgiving night.

The prosecutor said Neville gave conflicting accounts of the shooting, first stating it culminated an argument between the boy and his mother, Mrs. Dorothea Wendt Longcope, over drunkenness.

Court Puts O.K. on 'Bum' And 'Faker'

New York, Dec. 5 (AP)—Ruling that the words "bum" and "faker" are not slanderous, Supreme Court Justice Philip J. McCook dismissed today the $50,000 slander suit brought against Mayor LaGuardia by Charles Shanikroff, real estate broker.

Shankroof, in his complaint, said the mayor had uttered the words in addressing him during a board of estimate hearing.

Justice McCook said the word "bum" did not import a crime, punishable offense or moral turpitude

MILLIONS ASKED FOR ROADS

THIS IS LIFE

By Robert E. Rogers

My Dear Mayor Mansfield:

Busy as you are, I know that you will accept a suggestion calculated to add not merely to the gayety of nations but to the blitheness of this erstwhile Puritan city of Boston.

I suppose you have seen the news that Mayor LaGuardia of our sister metropolis of New York (Manhattan, the Bronx, Brooklyn, Richmond, Queens and Greenwich Village) has asked Gene Buck, president of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers, to write a good, snappy marching song which shall be to all good New Yorkers what "Old Nassau" is to Princeton, "Boola Boola" to Yale, and "We'll Die for Dear Old Rutgers" to, obviously, Rutgers.

But, one may ask, what about "The Sidewalks of New York"? A swell song, the mayor might conceivably reply, but the trouble with that song is that it is personally copyrighted by Al Smith. And, besides, if Smith is to be a candidate for mayor next year, LaGuardia is going to get awfully tired of "The Sidewalks of New York."

Something for a New Yorker to Be Proud of—If Possible

So the mayor wants something more genial and patriotic, one that will make a New Yorker proud that he doesn't live in Newark, New Jersey. The refrain might run—

The contest should be open to all American authors and composers, which would give George M. Cohan a fine chance to get back into the public eye again. It ought to be a song everyone can march to with a brass band, can dance to, and even can sing if the key is not too high.

You see what I am getting at, mayor. If this idea catches on, it will sweep the country like wildfire. Every New Yorker will celebrate public occasions like the homecoming of Jimmy Walker, with that grand new hymn:

"Here's a toast to the Bronx and Manhattan,
And Old-Fashioned Brooklyn, too . . ."

But you can doubtless finish it for yourself. The point is that Boston must not be neglected in this great drive for municipal culture and patriotism. Of course, we recognize the fact that Mayor LaGuardia's father was a bandmaster, and yours, Mr. Mayor, wasn't, but I do not think that should deter us. I think that Boston should have a municipal hymn written in a key and tempo which will be equally suitable for serious occasions, for parades, and for jazz orchestras.

There We Barely Get by With "The Wearing of the Green"

We do not want to be the only American city barely getting by with "The Star Spangled Banner" and "The Wearing of the Green." How shall we feel when we hear:

"Let's all holler, holler, b'gosh!
for Walla-Walla, Walla-Walla, Wash."

"Cheer, cheer, cheer for the beer
That made Milwaukee famous!"

Of course it ought to be dignified and Bostonian, something like Mr. Smith's (not Alfred E.) "America." Like this:

"Oh, temple of the well-baked bean,
Oh, shrine of sacred cod,
Where Lowell and Cabot both are seen
In converse grave with God."

Even that could be played in fox-trot time, I imagine.

Tax Rebate Would Seem A Very Suitable Prize

Well, Mr. Mayor, there's your idea! You'd have to offer a prize, of course. Say, a 10 per cent rebate on the real estate tax. And to make it a fair competition, you'd have to bar Nixon Waterman, the official poet-laureate of the New England Women's Press Association.

This newspaper, as ever in the van of progress, is willing to do its part. I offer the hospitality of this column to all entries in which the meter is reasonably correct and the rhyme not too utterly accidental. No free verse! I am old-fashioned enough to believe that even a popular song ought to rhyme correctly and be decently metrical.

Are you going to let New York and LaGuardia beat you to it? Ralph Waldo Emerson once wrote a Boston hymn. Let's bring it up to date!

10 Saved In Two Fires

MOTHER IS HEROINE

A Malden mother was injured battling flames to rescue her two small sons, three firemen were burned and a fourth was injured in a fire which swept a two-and-a-half-story wooden dwelling at Wyeth street, Malden, today.

In Dedham eight persons were rescued and 25 others driven to the street when fire raced through the three-story apartment block in High street.

Mrs. Vernon W. Hammersley, who occupies half the duplex house at Wyeth court, Malden, had stepped into a neighbor's house when she heard the screams of two young sons, Arnold, 3, and Richard, 2

Children's Play

[illegible]shing back into a flame-enveloped kitchen she carried the youngsters to safety as neighbors gave the alarm.

Battling the flames, firemen James G. Cummings, Martin J. Dempsey and Frederick F. Schultz were burned about the hands by falling timber

Ladderman Dennis M. Kelleher was badly shaken up and taken to fire headquarters for treatment, when he leaped from the rumbling board of the ladder as it made the turn at Ferry and Salem streets

Kelleher said he jumped because he feared he would be crushed between the ladder, an Elevated trolley and a truck that was parked near the corner

Smashes Door

Police Sergeant John G. McCarthy discovered the blaze, as he was passing the house

Smashing the front door, Sergeant McCarthy began awakening residents who were sound asleep.

Meanwhile, Patrolmen Harold Connors, Stephen Mulrenan and Nelson LaFrenier responded in a cruising car and went to the aid of Sergeant McCarthy.

In one apartment they found Mrs. Sarah Cutting, 64, a widow, who was bewildered by the smoke. She was carried to the street.

Joseph Connery, 50, his wife, 45, and their two children, Leona, 17, and Leo, 10, were found trapped in their suite, and led to safety.

The apparatus began arriving at this point, and firemen joined the police officers in rescuing Mrs. Slocum, 23, her sister, Catherine, 15, and Constance Ancrulas, 22.

Sewing needles and knitting needles are flying at Wellesley College just now as girl students steal time between classes to dress dolls by the hundred for Santa Claus to distribute to children whose stockings might otherwise be empty of toys on Christmas morning. License Fee Planned to End 'Quacks'

To eliminate "quack" doctors, Representative Behnard P. Casey sai dtoday he would file a bill establishing a $ annual registration fee for physicians and setting up a bureau of investigation under the state board of registration in medicine.

Casey conferred with board members regarding their annual report, filed yesterday, which estimated that 1000 of the 8000 doctors practising medicine in Massachusetts are unregistered.

[illegible] its report, the board asked for four regular inspectors and a $2 fee. Casey's bill will provide for the four inspectors but will increase the proposed registration, he said.

It was estimated that four regular inspectors would cost $16,000 annually in the way of salaries and expenses.

Casey said he was "shocked" by conditions disclosed in the board's report and that immediate steps to protect the public must be taken.

3 Dead in Flaming Home Feared Slain

Wakepda, S. D., Dec. 5 (AP)—Finding of the bodies of three persons in a burning farmhouse today led Sheriff William Russell to investigate a theory they had been shot to death before the blaze started.

HONEYMOONERS' WOE

Bridegroom Jailed as Forger

Framingham, Dec. 5—The two-day honeymoon of Joseph Ashworth, 36, of Mechanic street, Holliston, and Miss Doris Stevens, 17, being spent at the home of the bride's parents in Framingham, was rudely interrupted by police today.

As a result, it will be at least six months, perhaps longer, before the couple can plan to set up housekeeping

On Tuesday afternoon, Ashworth and Miss Stevens, accompanied by her parents, went to Newport, Vt., where they were married by Rev. John Speer.

At daybreak today there was a rap at the honeymoon house. Outside stood a squad of police headed by Chief John J. Maloney of Milford and Chief William W. Holbrook prepared to seize Ashworth.

The two chiefs had warrants charging Ashworth with check forgery, informed of th swarrants, Ashworth surrendered to arrest, imparting a kiss to his bride as he was being led from the house.

In Milford, however, he didn't fare so well. He was given two three-month sentences in Worcester jail.

Ashworth, police said, admitted he had served two years in Maine State Prison for breaking and entering Police say they have other charges against him.

Robber Slain, Two Women Kidnaped

Franklin, O., Dec. 5 (AP)—Marshall S. R. Graham killed one of three men who held up employes of the Franklin National Bank today and was himself wounded

The slain robber's companions kidnaped two women motorists and escaped, after dropping $7000

The two remaining robbers were reported surrounded south of here.

Virgil Brown, a passerby, seeing that the bank was being held up, took the ignition key from the robbers' car

The two fleeing men then commandeered the machine of Mrs. Bertha Whiseman and an unidentified woman to make their escape

Wellesley Girls Play Santa Claus

Christmas without toys?

Not if Wellesley's fairest can help it. In their spare moments—and what is so rare in a college girl's life"—they are sewing and knitting doll clothes for hundreds of dolls destined for little girls old Santa might otherwise forget.

How they'll complete this very considerable task between now and the night before Christmas is their secret

Two of Wellesley's prettiest and deftest seamstresses are Eleanor Clark and Virginia Sargent. A photographer halted them at their philanthropic needlework today in what appeared to be a toy-shop

Dedham Fire Refugees

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

With a high wind still blowing and the mercury near zero, this mother and daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Gibson and Patricia Gibson, five, were obliged to flee to the street today when fire broke out in their High street, Dedham, home. Neighbors gave them shelter. Mrs. Gibson had been home from a hospital only a week.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN

By Ann Marsters

Yesterday was the first day of frost—and that was the signal for 45,000 tulip bulbs to be tucked in their winter beds in the Public Garden.

It was a busy day for the city's gardeners, for altogether there are 70,000 bulbs to be warmly covered over, including those in Franklin Park.

Commissioner William P. Long, of the Park Department, has a great sense of responsibility toward these tulips. It is he who carefully plans the color scheme for each bed.

In October the bulbs are laid in the ground, where they sleep snugly until the first warm days in March. Then, gradually, their winter covering is removed.

Already Has Designs Planned for Copley Square

Commissioner Long also decides upon the design of the elaborate flower bed in Copley Square. Just last week he made up his mind about next spring's artistry.

It will be the seal of the city.

So what if the winds do blow and our shoulders hunch with the shivers? (says Pollyanna.) There's always something to look forward to—like tulips and a flowering city seal in the spring.

Maybe we're all wrong. Maybe Samuel Colt never did invent the revolver.

Anyway, a Mr. Klane, of Winchester, informs us that he was in New Hampshire last week, and that someone showed him, in an out-of-the-way graveyard, a stone erected to the memory of Thomas Fife, whose relatives seem to claim that he perfected the first revolver.

"Here lies the man
Never beat by a plan.
Straight was his aim,
And sure was his game,
Never had a lover,
But invented the revolver."

Anyone around here related to Mr. Fife?

Women as Politicians Still a Bit Muddled

Some women just don't "take" to politics—even when there are politicians right in their own families.

Senator Charles A. P. McAree, of Haverhill, was showing his sister around the State House, and they arrived, in due time, at the council chamber.

"This," said the senator, "is the council chamber—and I suppose you know what a councillor is?"

(Senator McAree insists that she wasn't fooling.)

A certain girl had them wondering last Saturday night at the Brunswick Casino. She was with a large party of young people, all in formal dress—with the exception of herself.

From her suede jacket to her heavy sports skirt, she was strikingly conspicuous as the answer to what the well-dressed outdoor girl should wear.

And the crowning touch was her short woolen socks and flat-heeled oxfords.

"After all," she explained, "it's a cold November night!"

Former Boston Socialite Realizes Ambition on Stage

HEARD ABOUT TOWN—Francis Grover Cleveland, former Boston socialite, has at last realized his ambition to become a Broadway actor. He is playing one of the many policemen in the New York hit, "Dead End." . . . Alexander Woollcott may disappear from his Sunday night hour before the end of the month. He's having trouble with his sponsors, who think he's speaking too freely on racial questions and Mussolini. . . . Max Lerner has resigned his post as lecturer on government at Harvard to become editor of "The Nation." . . . Elaine Barrie (John Barrymore's "Affair") will probably spend the winter in Russia playing at the Copley Theater. . . . According to an article in "Science," stutterers show marked improvement when they speak while moving on all fours. . . . I wonder if this method of correction will be included in the proposed Harvard course for the one out of every ten students who, the college discovers, has an impediment in his speech.

HOLLAND MUSICAL Shows Still Far From Boom Limi

By GEORGE HOLLAND

This observer cannot be convinced that lush days are here again in the theater until announcement comes tripping over announcement that several or more producers are preparing musical comedies, revues and operettas.

Only four musical shows (not counting "Jumbo," which is a hybrid beyond classification) are playing in New York. One is an opera, the Gershwin "Porgy and Bess." And Boston knows two of the others also. They are "Jubilee" and "At Home Abroad."

George Holland Wine," which re-writes that tremendously successful creative quartet, Laurence Schwab, Sigmund Romberg, Oscar Hammerstein II, and Frank Mandel. Messrs. Schwab and Mandel once produced operettas and musical comedies as partners, and fared very well indeed with such works as "Good News," "The Desert Song," "New Moon," and "Follow Thru."

• • •

In "May Wine," Mr. Schwab appears as the sole producer, and his former partner has contrived the libretto. Messrs. Romberg and Hammerstein, as in the past, have collaborated on the music and words. This discarding of a chorus is singular enough in its employment by one producing group, but when news comes along that another important Broadway writer, Otto Harbach, who wrote "Roberta," plans his new "The Lady in the Window" as a musical show sans ladies and gentlemen of the chorus, then I say things remain stack in the show-shops.

• • •

Perhaps a boiling stock market will speed up musical production. Not that many of the veteran musical comedy producers will benefit greatly by an upswing in the Big Board listings. Their fortunes shrank to such a size that many of them were put to it to finance single-setting setups.

But Wall Street big-shots were backers of 60 or 70 per cent of the musical comedies and revues produced in the boom days. A new crop of "angels" is ready for harvesting as soon as a bull market gets underway with vim.

• • •

Speaking of musicals, what has become of Damon Runyon's "Saratoga Chips"? Or of Vinton Freedley's new show by Cole Porter, Howard Lindsay and Russell Crouse?

Willie and Eugene Howard, mentioned a month ago as stars of both of these projected shows, have joined George White's "Scandals" in Pittsburgh. So has Rudy Vallee.

Kay Francis At Met

Playing the lead role in "I Found Stella Parish," Miss Francis is ably supported by such other headliners as Ian Hunter, Paul Lukas, Barton MacLane, Hilda Sybil Jason, Jessie Ralph, Walter Kingsford, Harry Beresford, Eddie Acuff, Joseph Sawyer and Robert Strange.

Mervyn Leroy directed this screen version of the thrilling story about the actress whose husband and child got her into plenty of difficulty.

On the stage, the Major Bowes' winners including "Sheet" Simmons, the Truman Brothers, the Red Bank Hillbillies, Joe Stephen Lang, Henri Burke, Celeste Alvi, Michael O'Byrne and McCormick and Hering.

"Kewpie Dolls" Hit

Kirsten Flagstad Soloist At Morning Musicale

By RUTH MARSTERS

The second Boston Morning Musicale of the season took place yesterday morning in the ballroom of the Hotel Statler with Kirsten Flagstad, as soloist.

The occasion marked the first concert appearance in Boston of the great dramatic soprano who, since her New York debut last season as Seglinde in "Die Walkure," has been the most widely acclaimed member of the Metropolitan Opera Company.

The glorious qualities of the Flagstad voice, her superb mastery of it, her innate dramatic abilities, her musical integrity, are of course facts established beyond any conceivable doubt.

But in yesterday's performance it was difficult to recognize the artist who has attained such superlative heights in Wagnerian roles as to make music history.

In explanation we are met with the incontrovertible fact that the morning hours are not propitious for song recitals. Their devastating effect upon the finest singers has been apparent all too frequently.

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1935, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Dec. 5—"Mutiny On The Bounty" cost $1,800,000 to produce but it's the best investment Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has had in years. In fact, it's such a rogue of a picture at the box office that Irving Thalberg will produce a sequel as soon as Clark Gable is free to play the starring role.

The sequel, "Pitcairn Island," by Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall, authors of "Mutiny on the Bounty," featured Fletcher Christian's experiences on the island after Fletcher and his Tahitian bride take up their abodes there. Frank Lloyd, who directed "Mutiny on the Bounty," has already been booked Louella O Parsons to direct "Pitcairn Island," which will also cost a few shekels.

• • •

I must say this same Charles Nordhoff and James Norman Hall have moved right into Hollywood. Samuel Goldwyn, on the strength of "Mutiny on the Bounty," has just purchased "Hurricane," which comes out in book form in April and will appear in a current magazine serially.

"Hurricane" is a modern story of the South Seas in which man's battle against the elements figures. A company will be sent to Tahiti to get authentic atmosphere and if I know Sam he is not going to let Irving Thalberg outdo him on spending money.

The death of Alice Faye's father and the unfair publicity that she had left him to starve, has had one happy result. Alice and Rudy Vallee who hadn't written each other for months, have been reconciled. I know the publicity is unfair because Alice lived next door to me and she was a devoted daughter to her father who lived with her up to a month ago when he went East. Alice returns the first of the year, 20th Century-Fox having taken up her option. And she will be a guest star of Rudy while she is East, appearing on his program.

Chatter in Hollywood: Here is something that only those nearest and dearest to Randolph Scott know. His has been paying attention for these many months to Heather Canning, socialite and daughter of Admiral Harrison Lanning. The Lanning family is said to approve of the handsome, quiet, reserved Randy and it wouldn't surprise their friends if an engagement were announced one of these days. Miss Lanning is blonde, beautiful and has been called the prettiest girl in navy circles.

Snapshots of Hollywood

CARY GRANT is not reconciling with VIRGINIA BRUCE-RILL, his ex-wife; that much is certain and from London comes word from friends of both that they have seen each other once; let's hope the BETTY GRABLE-JACKIE COOGAN engagement will endure for a year; anyway, it's not bad publicity with both of them starting out on a personal appearance tour; meanwhile what has become of TOBY WING to whom JACKIE was reported engaged only a few months ago.

The sick list includes ARCHIE MAYO in St. Vincent's with a badly behaved foot; WALTER LANG in the same hospital, improving; SAM WOODS with a dislocated hip and two vertebrae at the Good Samaritan wishing he hadn't stumbled over a cable; EDGAR ALLAN WOOLF at the cedars of Lebanon improved enough to appreciate the hundreds of messages and flowers; and are his friends happy? That's all today. See you tomorrow.

'Well, Who Wouldn't Smile?'

RANDOLPH SCOTT MARGARET SULLAVAN

Randolph Scott is Margaret Sullavan's love interest in "So Red the Rose," which comes to the Scollay screen tomorrow and opens at the Modern on Saturday.

At the Scollay

A drama of the old-time West will be unfolded in "Barbary Coast" which opens tomorrow at the Scollay. Miriam Hopkins, Edward G. Robinson and Joel McRae will star. "So Red the Rose," the other feature, will feature Margaret Sullavan, Randolph Scott and Walter Connoly.

Gayety Bill

New vaudeville will be presented at the Gayety for the rest of the week, but the screen program remains unchanged topped by "Diamond Jim," drama of Broadway in the days when it was really the Gay White Way.

Globe's Features

Globe screen features for the next three days will include "Public Hero No. 1" and "Two for Tonight," with Bing Crosby as the singing star in the latter. Chester Morris has the lead in "Public Hero No. 1" with Jean Arthur, Lionel Barrymore, Joseph Calleia and Paul Kelly co-

Garden's Ski-Party Advances Winter Calendar

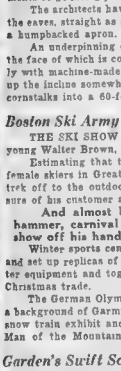
CAPABLE OF AS MANY character changes as a barnstorming stock actor, the Boston Garden today is pretending to be a hunk carved from the heart of Franconia Notch.



Austen Lake

Having tricked itself out at odd times during the summer as a miniature slice of Maine's wildwood, and as a rodeo model of Texas' wildwest, the Old Depot is now dolled up as a segment of New England's wintry Alps, with a ski-hoist and a slalom slide.

Of course, the illusion from the heights of the Garden chute is neither so charming nor so lofty as those at Canaan Mountain or Hanover, N. H. There are no toy hamlets dotting the snowy valleys far below, no purple hills rolling away from the eye, and no aching emptiness of sleeping nature.

But the sight down the Garden glide from the ceiling girders induces the same fuzz on the tongue, tonal tickles and abdominal heebies, and the ski-leapers are just as apt to bust their fundaments or go into a pancake spin, as on any of the outdoor trestles.

The architects have raised a 200-foot incline that starts under the eaves, straight as a kettle snout, and tapers below the jump to a humpbacked apron.

An underpinning of cross hatched rafters supports the chute, the face of which is covered with cocoa-matting and frosted thickly with machine-made snow from a blower that snorts the flakes up the incline somewhat as a fodder chopper blows pulverized cornstalks into a 60-foot farm silo.

* * *

Boston Ski Army

THE SKI SHOW IS A novelty born in the lively brain of young Walter Brown, son of George V., the Garden's headman.

Estimating that there are more than 40,000 active male and female skiers in Greater Boston, who spill into their woolens and trek off to the outdoor centers at the first snowfall, Brown was sure of his customer appeal.

And almost before the first tap of a carpenter's hammer, carnival promoters came begging to buy the show off his hands and pay him a nice profit.

Winter sports centers hustled down to buy propaganda space and set up replicas of their pretty countryside. Merchants of winter equipment and toggery set up their booths with an eye to Christmas trade.

Garden's Swift Scene Shift

AT MIDNIGHT, SATURDAY, when the ski-show closes, an army of workmen will rush in to dismantle the settings and haul them away. Within a few hours the last of the tinsel rubbish and the great scaffold will have been erased like the chalkmarks on a schoolboy's slate. The rink will be set up as usual for the Cubs' Sunday hockey game.

And immediately after the Bruins Tuesday game, another band of laborers will scoop off the ice and fill the playing surface six inches deep with hard-rolled soil for the football game between the Notre Dame Stars and the Eastern Collegiates.

No scene shifts so swiftly as that at the Garden, which can wipe out the musty odors and rubbish of a rodeo and set up the area as a mammoth ballroom with polished floor, and potted palms and cozy bowers. All within a few hours.

As the crowd leaves a hockey game, hot water is being squirted through the brine pipes, melting the ice.

Electric scrapers, or "Squeegees," scoop up the softened cakes and herd them into a hole in the floor that connects with the city sewers. Large overhead blowers dry the cement base.

The Garden has rigged the rafters with specialized circus gear and moved Ringling's enormous dunnage in a single afternoon. It has built a six-day bicycle track in a day and torn it out in a night.

The rodeo, with its dirt floor, runways for cattle and stalls for horses, comes between suns and goes the same way.

There Was No "Slow Whistle"

AS RESULT OF 46 FOOTBALL deaths this year, a flood of criticism is being raised at the "slow whistle." Though referees this season were instructed to hold their shrill-peeps longer than formerly to give greater freedom in lateral passing, my opinion is they blew just as quickly as ever.

Knowing that the slow whistle opens the door to such complications as delayed fumbling, piling on, crawling and emotional bursts among the players, the referees privately agreed among themselves to breathe blasts into their silver pieces as they have always done, the instant the action had stalled.

Hard Headed Basque

PHYSICIANS EXAMINING Pauline Uscudun, the Basque fighter, who is matched with Joe Louis on December 13, say he has one of the honiest skulls on record, three-quarters of an inch thick on the top and more solid than the average ox. And, whereas it takes from five to 15 seconds for X-rays to penetrate the normal human skull, it requires five minutes to do the same job on Uscudun's head.

Thus the Basque wears no padded headgear in his training bouts with spar mates, and uses his lowered cranium as a buttress to ward off blows and as a rock on which more than one man has broken his hands.

This, then, seems his one hope to win—by exposing his concrete dome as a tempting target on which Louis will shatter his knuckles and default.

As a contrast to Paulino's approach to Louis, one recalls how Primo Carnera made a habit of straddling out his enormous feet and, by accident or design, stepping on his opponent's tootsies with all the crushing effect of an office safe.

Yet Primo did not get close enough to the Negro to step on him. And my guess is where Primo failed with his feet Uscudun will flunk with his head.

Ireland and Canada Show Wares at Armory Classic

By Walter Kiley

Horses, kings of the thoroughbred world, knights and ladies of the saddle in glittering array, transform drab Commonwealth Armory into an equine paradise as the 110th Cavalry opens its eighth annual horse show at 7:45 this evening.

Here for the next four days, leaders of society in their tiers of boxes and other horse lovers will sit in as a constant parade of prancing steeds pass in review.

Success is already assured this third revival of the old 110th Cavalry shows. Indications point to a complete sell-out for every performance. Entries are record-breaking in number.

Seating facilities have been increased by the erection of new steel stands at both ends, the same stands which accommodated patrons at the Boston College-Holy Cross football game last Saturday. A crowd of 6000, bettering last year's capacity of 4500, can be provided for.

Many innovations have been introduced, including a promenade around the show ring, delight of the railbirds, the Boston Horse Show props, the old red covered ring and brush jumps and other paraphernalia which aided in the Boston Garden successes.

KENNEDYS

Every local exhibitor has entered the best of his or her stable, with Ireland, Canada and eastern states being likewise liberally represented.

Much local interest will center in the four-horse string of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Kennedy of Brookline.

Yet within a year's time his stable has made amazing forward strides, until today, under the capable handling of Trainer Arthur Maguire, the Kennedy stable is rated as tops of the local circuit, particularly in the hunting division.

It made its debut at the 110th Cavalry Show a year ago, Kennedy pinning his faith in several green hunters which had been only recently imported from Ireland by Richard Sheehan of County Cork, Ireland.

Kennedy looks to see his Erin's Isle, Bachelor's Flower and Erin's Son wage hot competition for the fine hunters' championship trophy, which, donated by the Oyster Harbors Club, is to be awarded the champion in addition to the money prizes.

Erin's Son is perhaps the outstanding entry in the hunter division, having captured a long string of impressive victories during the past season. His High Tide is a crack entry in the open horse class. Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy have also presented a ladies' harness challenge trophy to be won three times by the same stable before being retired.

The committee in charge, headed by Chairman Col. Philip L. Brown, commanding officer of the 110th Cavalry, a Dartmouth graduate, has designated the opening performance this evening as Governor's Night.

SKILL MARRIED TO DARING

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Imagine swooping down icy slopes at 70 miles per hour and out into the treacherous open spaces to land—not on a snow encrusted mountainside—but in the confined areas of a manufactured winter playground. That is what Sigfried Buchmayr and his venturesome ski jumping rivals will attempt twice daily at the Boston Garden. Buchmayr is one of the world's foremost trick skiers. The Garden winter sports exhibition stars today

Starting this afternoon, two shows will be given daily, a matinee beginning at 2:30 and ending at 4, an evening program from 8:30 to 10, winding up with a Saturday night performance.

Expert professional ski jumpers, world famous trick and fancy artists on both skis and skates, racing by noted teams of sledge dogs whose exploits are already recorded in Northland-a mushing history, will perform their hazardous stunts.

TRICK SKIER

Real snow and real ice, with ski jumps where a speed of 70 miles will be hit up down the treacherous slopes before the taking off into the Garden's open spaces, have been imported to make for actual outdoor winter realism.

Leading manufacturers of skis, skates, equipment and clothing have co-operated to the full. Many of their exhibition booths are replicas of famous "spots" in the north mountain country.

Mrs. Florence Clark of North Woodstock, N. H., has brought along her famous team of sledge dogs.

She will exhibit a team of nine malas—the eight brownes and Old Covak in the lead—the same sturdy sledge dogs which she drove over the carriage road to the summit of Mt. Washington three years ago.

20-YEAR-OLD

He skates at amazing speeds, making threes, brackets, rockets, counters and all the rest of the difficult maneuvers.

Massachusetts will see its William Pulaski in action against the best of the ski jumpers.

The 20-year-old Greenfield boy is the youngest ski professional in the United States, a youth who began to show exceptional promise at the age of five when he was shooting down the ice-encrusted Berkshires with all the Columbus, O., Dec. 5 (INS)—A wrestling match so violent that the referee was knocked out by a wild blow and a policeman was hurled from the ring today placed Bert Potts, Chicago referee, in the hospital here with a possible brain concussion. His condition was given as "fair."

Referee Potts was knocked out by a wild blow. Al Haft, promoter, asked police to detain Sunooke pending the outcome of Potts' injuries.

De Kuh, who fought Jack Sharkey, Young Stribling and other champions and near champions, said the stock market and "mismanagement" cost him all his ring earnings and now he's trying to become an artist. Impaired sight and speech forced him out of the ring.

$3,000,000 'CUT' IN NEW YORK

22 Also Rans Advertised by Touts in Information Given Out Yesterday

New York, Dec. 5 (INS)—The attorney-general's office has announced "sucker lists" containing between 48,000 and 50,000 names were found by raiding squads in the investigation of the "tout trust."

This "trust" lures some $3,000,000 annually from gullible Americans who would like to play the races, but don't know how to pick their horses.

"It doesn't seem reasonable that right-minded men and women—and a big percentage of the names on the 'sucker lists' are of business and professional people—would fall for such tommyrot as these touts put out," one of the Attorney-General's men declared.

"And each of the names on the 'sucker lists' must have fallen at one time or another for the tipster baloney or their names wouldn't be on the lists."

Any man or woman or child who wants to know how that volume of names can be compiled can get a working idea for spending no more than the price of a single tout's tipping fee.

TIPSTER SHEETS

Any corner news stand in New York and especially Boston carries from six to 20 so-called "turf weeklies," at prices ranging from 15 cents to a dollar. Inside their pages are items like this:

"Corner Boy—Only hope we reach you in time with the good news that Corner Boy, after a campaign in New England is headed right for the winner's circle at Charles Town. Never a bit better and can fin-can home wherever the boy gets the office."

"It so happens that Corner Boy running in the 5th at Charles Town yesterday must have mailed his signals—he ran dismally out of the money in a field of eight starters."

This same sheet contained the names of 70-odd other horses, 12 of which started yesterday and one of which won—with alluring paragraphs about each. Then, in heavy type just inside the cover, is the come-on—an offer of something for nothing. It reads:

"Mid-weekly bulletin mailed—free."

"—— offers every reader the benefit of the latest reports received from its exclusive trackmen. Simply send us the coupon and we will mail you our mid-weekly bulletin by first class mail, giving you

2 LONGSHOTS AT EACH TRACK

"These horses are being prepped for a coup next time out, and you will make plenty following them.

"You are entitled to this—free! "Our purpose is to keep you posted on the latest information at all tracks. There is absolutely no obligation whatsoever on your part. Simply mail the coupon and get the next bulletin."

SUCKER FOLK

Then there's the coupon, with spaces for name, address, city and town.

The reader is at least casually interested in racing or he wouldn't have the sheet in the first place. The idea of a periodic longshot would read and no obligation at all never puts one in.

Once in the writer will get letters from folks from Maine to California for as long as a year, with every conceivable kind of proposition.

Should any of the horses sent out in the mid-weekly bulletin happen to win we'll figure it out for yourself." The "sucker" wonders if there isn't something in it after all, and becomes ripe for tipster letters involving the names of "sure winners" the payments running anywhere from chance to $100.

TURF SENSATION

Inside a copy of another current issue of another tip sheet—this sheet, incidentally listed 2 horses that started yesterday—no one of which won—was a folded sheet offering the sensation of the turf world "free." A litany of turf information in two-horse parlay form for exactly 25 cents.

It is not stated that the regular fee for this service is $5 a week that the special bargain rate is merely an "extraordinary get-acquainted offer." And reference is made to a two-page "spread" on the tip sheet, which says, in part:

"Announcing: The everlasting streak—the never ending profits—the money making service—the

CORUM SELECTS THREE ALL-ELEVENS

PILNEY OVER SHAKESPEARE

By Bill Corum

New York, Dec. 5—The sports editor has asked me to name my first, second and third All-America football teams today, and it is wiser than otherwise for a reporter to try to please the editor. It may never make him rich, but he lasts longer that way.

My first idea was to pick my players out of my hat. But I get so many columns out of my hat that the game has lost its novelty.

Besides, did you ever see a newspaper man on the stage or screen who didn't work with his hat on? It's a violation of the guild code, or something.

It is only natural that some odd situations should crop up in the selection of these all-teams. I saw Notre Dame play three games this fall, and as I saw it Pilney was a more sensational back than Shakespeare. The latter was great. He was steady. He was the best college punter of the year, I imagine. He was, and is, a triple threat.

ANDY PILNEY

But Pilney, the Chicago high school star who did not catch fire at Notre Dame until this season, was a burning flame of brilliance and inspiration.

He was one of those hell-for-leather carriers who can't be stopped because they won't stop, and his forward passing bordered at times on the miraculous.

Yet you will look in vain for the name of Pilney on most all teams. His almost tragic injury in the fading moments of the Ohio State game made Shakespeare, finished player that he was, Notre Dame's all-man for the great majority of selectors.

And down at Princeton the men who played on the team will tell you that Montgomery is every bit as good a guard as stalwart John Weller.

But you'll be going far down into the list of alternates to find Montgomery mentioned, whereas Weller's name will greet your eye on the majority of first teams from coast to coast.

Princeton was so potent that every selector feels a mite duty bound to name one Tiger for his troupe, and somehow or other, fate put the finger on Weller as Princeton's all-man.

MONTGOMERY

Don't, pray, misunderstand this. It would be difficult to say too much in praise of Weller's play so was T. William Montgomery. He was a truly great guard, and of Wheling, West Va.

But enough of this idle chatter. Let us get down to the moment as business at hand. Don't permit my wagging tongue and wiggling typewriter to keep you in suspense an instant longer.

Center—Lonnie Jones, Ohio State.
Right Guard—William Montgomery, Princeton.
Right Tackle—Larry Ins, California.
Right End—Gilbert Lea, Princeton.
Quarterback — Ken. Sandbach Princeton
Right Halfback—Andy Pilney, Notre Dame.
Fullback—Sheldon Riese, Minnesota.

SECOND TEAM

Left tackle—Spain, Southern Methodist University.
Center—Clifford, Army.
Right guard—France, Fordham.
Right Tackle—Galbreath, Illinois.
Right Guard—Wagner, Notre Dame
Quarterback—Baugh, Texas Christian
Left Halfback—Wilson, Southern Methodist
Right halfback—Simmons, Iowa
Fullback—Grayson, Stanford University

Center—Gallinan, Princeton.
Right Guard—Wagner, Michigan State,
Right End—Jack Brittingham, California
Quarterback—Roscoe, Yale.
Left Halfback—Heap, Northwestern
Right Halfback — Shakespeare, Notre Dame
Fullback—Jankowski, Wisconsin.

Hut Best Horse

Kandell was well-known to New England followers of King Horse. He was the Baltimore lad that paralyzed a 35 note into $50,000 and a horse stable only a few seasons back. He raced his stable in the eastern section at Narragansett, Rockingham and Suffolk Downs. The string was headed by the veteran campaigner Hut

Kandell was a gambler at heart, jamming huge bets on his cauliflowers, but there were times when he dropped plenty of American currency on his steeds.

He is survived by his widow Mrs. Sophie Kandell; a six-year-old son, Jerome; his mother, Mrs. Ida Kandell, and two brothers and a sister.

DIES AFTER 30-FOOT DROP

By Dave Wilson

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 5—From the lowest colored swipe in the hoss barns to the elite of the race track clubhouses, the sudden death of Philip "Pinky" Kandell in Deming, New Mexico, saddened the Charles Town populace this afternoon.

Word reached the local track today that Pinky, as he was known in horse circles, was killed yesterday in the New Mexico city when his auto left the highway.

Kandell's side was crushed in the accident, while his traveling companion, Mickey Reynolds, suffered right leg and back injuries. The latter will recover.

Kandell and Reynolds were on their way to the Santa Anita track where a big string of thoroughbreds were to campaign.

Circus on Skates at Arena

By Will Connell

A Circus on Skates is included in the program of the Gala Skaters' Frolic at the Boston Arena on December 14, one week from Saturday night, for the benefit of the Christmas Basket Fund.

With the Circus a colorful and entertaining show for young and old, the Frolic becomes the best affair of its kind this season.

Seven speed skating races, Queen of the Frolic competition, fancy skating by members of the famed Skating Club of Boston, and general skating are included in the Frolic schedule.

Ted Gontar and Al Surrette, veteran directors of ice shows are in charge of the Circus, and promise the best in the history of the annual Frolic.

Roy Boldgett, Joan Tozzer and many others from the Skating Club ranks will appear in solo and pair skating numbers, making the Frolic a standout from the exhibition angle.

Competitive sparkle is found in the seven speed skating races, a 220 for boys, Class B; 440 for girls, 440 for women, 880 for men, and a mile for men, and an 880 open for men. Entries for these events close Saturday with Ben Levins at the Boston Arena.

Queen of the Frolic honors include the award of a beautiful fur jacquette, donated by Scott Furriers. Other competition of a similar nature, with valuable awards, will be arranged.

General skating, from the close of the Frolic events until midnight, concludes one of the most attractive swarts of its kind in the country this season.

Luke Phantom Is Tops in Opener

By Dave Wilson

(Selections made for fast track)

BEST BET—CANTERSINE

Charles Town, W. Va., Dec. 5—Cantersine, consistent New England performer, sticks out like the proverbial sore thumb over an indifferent lot of lowly platers opposing her in the five furlongs of the fourth number here tomorrow afternoon.

FIRST—LUKE PHANTOM, POVEL, JUSTA FLIGHT

LUKE PHANTOM, second to Gentleman, just failed to get up and earn brackets last time. Under more energetic handling, he figures to be along in time to graduate from the maiden ranks. The wise gentry tell me that Selby Burch shipped in POVEL for a killing. They say that recent poor Bowie form goes for the old goat that manicures the morgue. JUSTA FLIGHT may have been a trifle short of work when he finished fourth to Paul Junior. She forced a torrid pace in that most recent endeavor.

SECOND—TOLIMATA, CURRANTS, RADIATOR

TOLIMATA gets the top figures on good New York and Maryland races. This fleet filly led home a clever field that included Tody West last time out at Empire City. CURRANTS, pitted too ambitiously in recent endeavors, a dropping down a few notches and appears well suited by all conditions. RADIATOR, third to Gifted Lady, lost acres of ground on the turns that day. He will be a dangerous factor if kept in on the rail.

THIRD—NERVY NELLA, DOLENTE, BY SURPRISE

NERVY NELLA, a winner at the recent Agawam session, comes highly recommended by the Clocker. Just looks like a question of her finding the short way home. DOLENTE, another successful New England campaigner, figures to offer the contention. BY SURPRISE displayed high early speed last trip.

FOURTH—CANTERSINE, DEBBIE, NORA'S GRACE

CANTERSINE outclasses this ordinary lot and will be coming up ft and ready. Contention, if any, will likely be furnished by DEBBIE, fast but faint-hearted. NORA'S GRACE is a mighty useful animal around these parts and figures next best

FIFTH—BENCADER, REPEAL, BARNEY SEXTON

BENCADER is dropping down a few notches and looks all over a winner. The Bond colorbearer did not do at all badly behind Furled Flag last time out. REPEAL figures to offer the contention This plater showed well on Maryland tracks before shipping here. BARNEY SEXTON figures to improve off his most recent endeavor.

SIXTH—APATHY, MISS CATALAN, McDONALD H.

This is the most wide open affair on the card. The winner may turn up in APATHY. This plater was favored over better company during the recent Bowie season. MISS CATALAN looks all over the one to offer the strongest contention. McDONALD H. had all the earmarks of a dead-shot thoroughbred last time. He may improve enough to win

SEVENTH—ST. CHRISTOPHER, PLAIN ACE, HOSAIN

String along with ST. CHRISTOPHER in this wide-open affair. This plater's recent endeavors haven't been so hot, but the work tab shows that he is again ready for a scoring effort. PLAIN ACE, outmatched in recent Maryland efforts, will be nicely suited here. HOSAIN merits good figures if given a chance to parade postward.

WINDMILL Stopped BY RAE

Rae dropkicked Maxie in 17 minutes 27 2nd-seconds to annex the first fall, but Goldberg came right back with a reverse hiplock to annex things, winning the second fall in 7 minutes, 25 seconds.

Tommy turned his "ray" on in the third fall and won on a backdrop in 5 minutes, 25 seconds.

In the semifinal Hermes Olsen and Henry Piera tussled 30 minutes to a draw. Other results

BOYS' CLUBS Hold Sport Night

The Boys' clubs of Boston, Charlestown district, will conduct their monthly sport night Wednesday, December 18, at the Eben D. Jordan Memorial Gymnasium, Charlestown, featuring a wrestling carnival.

Boys' clubs and intercollegiate champions, together with well-known figures in local wrestling circles, will take part.

Mr. Boston Two-Hour Limit to Mat Matches

By JACK CONWAY

THE AMERICAN Wrestling Association has set a two-hour time limit on all championship matches. This rule will go into effect when Dan O'Mahoney risks his title against Ray Steele in a finish bout, best two falls out of three, at the Garden a week from Friday night.

O'Mahoney and Steele didn't do any cheering when told about the new rule. They would like to battle for a week. If necessary, to settle their mat dispute.

Mr. Boston

I think mat fans will give the American Wrestling Association a vote of thanks. Personally I have lost my share of sleep as two wrestlers have struggled until the small hours of the morning to decide who was the better grappler.

Strangler Lewis and Joe Malcewicz battled until 2 30 a. m. one night at Braves Field, while Jim Londos and Ed Don George also waited until the milkman arrived to end their contest at Fenway Park.

Then there was the three-hour tussle between George and Nick Lutze at the Garden.

I am a wrestling fan, but there is a limit to my endurance. Maybe if I did a little training I would be able to watch a three to four-hour wrestling bout without suffering.

There was a rolling off in attendance at the wrestling shows following the George-Londos go. Even a mat fan didn't want to feel he had to stay out all night to witness the end of a bout.

* * *

DANNO AIDED

O'MAHONEY helped satisfy the desire of wrestling fans to get home near midnight. He has won most of his bouts inside of an hour. His aggressiveness and power have beaten down his opponents quickly.

DeGlane, George and Londos have been the only grapplers who have compelled O'Mahoney to step to win.

The Irishman looks for a strenuous battle when he opposes Steele. The latter is a first-class wrestler, also a student of rough grappling.

Steele recently pinned King Lewinsky in 30 second in a mixed contest in St. Louis, and is of the opinion he will leave the Garden ring as champion.

AMATEURS

THE IRISH American A. A. will stage the fourth series of elimination bouts in its Diamond Belt tournament at the Arena next Monday night. The winners of these various tournaments will later collide in the finals.

Tom Kanaly, who was formerly athletic director at the B. A. A., is in charge of the entries of the Irish American A. A. bouts. Tom tells me there will be open classes at 118, 126, 135, 147, 160 and 175 pounds.

"The pickup in interest in amateur bouts is a healthy sign," Kanaly told me. "It indicates the public is interested in the right kind of boxing.

"The Diamond Belt bouts have furnished action. I look for a good show next Monday night, while the finals should be jammed with thrills.

"Boston has always been one of the best cities in the country for amateur boxing. When we staged the national championships, they always made money.

"With amateur clubs conducting shows regularly once more we shall develop some top-notch talent. Most of the great boxers who have represented England during the past 15 years got their starts in the amateurs at bouts at the B. A. A., Irish American A. A. or St. Joe's."

RANDOM SHOTS

THE winter sports carnival which opens at the Garden this afternoon, offers a new thrill to sports fans . . . Ski jumping, sled dog contests, fancy skating and other winter sports events should prove interesting . . . thousands of people are today enthusiastic about winter sports . . . As one of the pioneers who invaded the White Mountains 15 years ago to attend winter sports and go shooting down the side of mountain peaks on a flying toboggan, I have gained satisfaction in seeing this new interest in ski jumping, sled dogs, tobogganing and other winter sports . . . Every one of our country Boston golf clubs now have their ski jumps for the younger members of their organizations.

Tony Shucco has started strenuous training for his bout with Al McCoy at the Garden on December 20 . . . Shucco's New England light heavyweight championship is at stake . . . Shucco is a better boxer than McCoy, but not so heavy a puncher . . . Tony says McCoy won't be able to nail him with one of his hefty punches . . . Paulino wants the world to know "Bombers" Joe Louis won't knock him out in their 15-round bout in the New York Garden a week from Friday night . . . The Basque has a jaw of iron . . . The price scale for the bout is $2, $3, $4, $5, $10 and $15 . . . A sellout will mean a gate of $14,000.

Catholic Teams Spurn Coast Bid

Rams Say No to H.C.

PROS TO PLAY FOR K. C. CHARITY

San Francisco, Dec. 5 (INS) — The proposed Catholic intercollegiate football championship game, in which undefeated Holy Cross was to meet an outstanding Jesuit or Christian Brothers eleven here late this month, definitely is off, it was announced today by local Knights of Columbus leaders, who were to sponsor the contest.

As a substitute, the "Caseys" will engage two professional elevens to play in their annual charity contest here.

With this announcement, Richard M. Roche, chairman of the Knights of Columbus football committee, cut loose with a blast against sponsors of post-season classics at Pasadena, New Orleans and Miami, for their rather persistent failure to invite Catholic colleges to participate.

He said:

"Although there are many outstanding Catholic varsity grid teams in the nation, it is a strange thing that out of three so-called post season 'Bowl' classics, at Pasadena, New Orleans and Miami, no Catholic college is a participant; and this condition has existed for many years.

BAN ON CATHOLICS

"In the West, the rules of the Pasadena Rose Bowl game will always prevent St. Mary's, Santa Clara, San Francisco, Loyola, Gonzaga and other Pacific coast Catholic grid teams from taking part in that game.

"As for eastern teams, with the single exception of Notre Dame on New Year's Day of 1925, no other Catholic squad has ever been tendered a bid. Similar conditions apparently exist at New Orleans and Miami.

"In view of these circumstances, we felt we had hit upon a 'natural' in which the whole nation would display keen interest.

"The game would have been staged well in advance of the Shrine East-West classic, so there would not be any competition or hindrance of either the Shrine game or the Pasadena Bowl New Year's event.

"We will continue fostering a contest between the outstanding professional teams and players of the nation; and will stage our game in mid-January."

St. Mary's College and Fordham both refused to meet Holy Cross in the proposed game here.

Santa Clara was willing to play if it licked Texas Christian in an important intersectional game here Saturday. Dr Edward Anderson, Holy Cross coach, didn't care to await the result of this game, however, it was announced by Roche.

FRED MOSELEY — GEORGE FORD — LEO ECKER — JOHNNY NESMITH

Forgotten in the thick of new competition in the past Harvard football season, Johnny Nesmith, George Ford, Captain Fred Moseley and Leo Ecker, all of Dick Harlow's eleven, turn their talents to hockey. It's dollars to doughnuts they meet with better success on the ice than they did on the gridiron. The Crimson squad is working out at Boston Arena.

CRIMSON GRIDIRONERS TURN TO ICE

Gridmen Bolster Crimson Sextet

Twelve Grid Men Seek More Honors

Let this serve as notice that Harvard's varsity sextet will be a rough-ridin', two-fisted outfit, neither asking nor offering quarter this season.

Moseley, the captain and center on the first forward line, promises to be the big gun in the Crimson attack this winter, as he was a year ago.

FORD, ECKER

Then there are the Belmont twins, George Ford and Leo Ecker, aids partners in hockey as well as football.

With Ecker on his left wing and Ben Hallowell on his right, Ford is expected to realize the promise he showed as a schoolboy star.

Another pair of varsity gridmen who are slated for regular berths are Johnny Nesmith of Cambridge, a pass slinging and punting half back, and Russ Allen, former Exeter star, a husky guard.

Other gridmen who rank high in Coach Joe Stubbs' favor are Ralph Pope of Brookline and Nohis and Greenough, a forward, and Bob Waldinger, reserve goalie. Both were halfbacks on the jayvee eleven.

NEEDED WEIGHT

The influx of gridmen gives Stubbs one of the finest balanced squads he's had at Harvard in several years, which boasts size and weight as well as its usual speed and dexterous stick handling.

Harvard teams for several years have depended mainly upon speed and teamwork to overcome their objective opponents, Yale, Dartmouth and Princeton, as well as the two Canadian foes, Toronto and McGill.

Dick Harlow's football players lend the hockey squad a size which places it nearly on a par with the other title claimants, which should make Harvard's chances better than ever.

"Bull" Returns

Chicago, Dec. 5—Edward "Bull" Durham, White Sox hurler who retired last season because of a sore arm and a generally run down condition, has been placed on the active list again by Baseball Commissioner Kenesaw M. Landis.

Sophs Put B.C. Relays On Feet

As the annual fight for berths on Boston College's relay quartets gets underway at University Heights, Coach Jack Ryder revealed that sophomores will be the basis for both his one and two mile teams.

Three crack soph quartermilers, Ed Cady, Joe Kelley, and Tom McFarland, are conceded very good chances to make the mile team.

Cady and Kelley are both dash men but can run fast quarters as well. McFarland is primarily a hurdler but he can step that 440 fast enough to mass him valuable on this team.

Others who will shortly be racing for berths on the team include John King, another soph; Jim O'Leary and Bill Malone, both veterans and seniors.

Coach Ryder has not definitely decided which men will try for each team as some of his stars are fast at both the quarter and half.

The sophomores that seem slated for berths on the two mile relay are Dick Gill and Art Cox, both from English high.

Hockey Opener

Four games are scheduled for the opening of the Commercial Amateur Hockey League at the Arena tomorrow evening. The first game is to start at 7 o'clock.

NIGHT BASEBALL GOSPEL SPREADING

A. L. MAY TRY IT THIS YEAR

By Joe Cashman

Night baseball, a thousand to one shot that came through at last winter's National League meeting, will receive plenty of consideration in the debate field when the majors' magnates meet in Chicago next week.

Cincinnati, the only club to risk a bob on the moonlight entry this past season, harvested a nice profit. Consequently, several other clubs are now anxious to cash in on what they believe a certain money maker.

Present rules limit the number of night games any club may play at home to seven, and any visiting team can refuse to play after dark. The Reds are said to favor increasing the maximum to 12 or 15 games and would have visiting clubs compelled to play if requested.

FRICK LIKES IT

Both Cincinnati motions would seem to stand a fair chance of being adopted, since the champion Chicago Cubs and the St. Louis Cardinals are making plans to equip their parks with lights and circumstances force the Braves and Phillies to favor any experiment that shapes up as a financial success.

The lightning bug has even bitten the American League, which heaped scorn on the senior circuit for approving the plan at the 1934 meeting.

It's likely that the majority of American League clubs still frown on the scheme, but the Browns and the Senators would like to try it and may possibly get permission.

Ford Frick, president of the National League, has become "sold" on night ball. He visions it eventually putting every club in the loop in the "black."

Now, performances under the stars may be the cure-all for every baseball ill, but this envoy still thinks that night ball will pay dividends only as long as the novelty of it lasts and that in the long run it will do the national pastime no good.

There's nothing in particular wrong with afternoon baseball that covering it with the mantle of darkness will remedy.

The winning clubs in both leagues coined money last season. And the second division clubs had their troubles keeping the wolf from the door.

It was always thus and always will be regardless of what hours of the 24 are designated for the games.

JIMMY ARCHER

If there's one criticism more than any other that's heard about baseball these days it isn't that games are played in the afternoon but that the pastime has become too mechanical.

The fan of pre-war days holds that the players today are merely managerial puppets.

A resident of Chicago, he admitted he doesn't attend more than three or four games a year.

"The game lacks thrills now because most managers insist on doing all the thinking for their players. I can't watch that kind of baseball.

"We were allowed to play our own game. We'd be told to use our own judgment in tight spots. We'd do it anyway, regardless of managerial orders.

"The man on the 'spot' at the bat or afield is in a better position to know what to do than anybody on the bench or coaching lines.

"The modern players know as much about the game as their predecessors. Give them a little more rein on the field, and they'll give you better baseball and draw bigger crowds."

Whether there's anything in what these old-timers say, it might be a lot more profitable to follow their suggestions than to go overboard on the night ball experiment or any other synthetic scheme.

Still another tip-sheet—this one listed 22 starters yesterday and failed to get a single winner with selections at all four currently running tracks—declares:

"The only chance for the player with small capital to build up his bankroll is with long shot parlays. For a $2 play he may get a hatful of money . . . Saturday parlays are the best means to use for a start toward racing success and a bankroll."

Palpably the Saturday parlays could be no worse than trying to build up a bankroll playing the 22 straight losers given in the sheet's selections of horses starting yesterday.

LEWIS HANEY ON U. S. TREND

Bankers, Businessmen Have Learned Lesson

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, Dec. 5—Letters have come to me challenging my statement that business leaders and bankers have learned a lesson. In view of these letters, I would call attention to the public statements made by the head of the New York Stock Exchange and by the Federal Reserve Advisory Council.

He also urges that trained economists of vision should study out social problems, and that their judgment be made effective.

• • •

The Advisory Council of the reserve system has come out with suggestions looking toward controlling inflation. It urges that steps be taken now to prevent a disastrous boom—disastrous because booms are always followed by depression.

If the business leaders who compose this board were looking only for their immediate speculative gains, they would not do this. They have evidently learned the lesson of 1929.

As another indication of all this, you may ask where are such old leaders as Wiggin, Mitchell and Insull now?

• • •

My observation is that the great majority of business men are now in favor of maintaining as high a standard of living among laborers as possible, and to that end they favor higher wages than they used to.

I also find that most business men are mor reasonable and moderate in their views about tariff protection.

Such changes of view do not mean that "human nature" has been changed, but they do mean that business men have learned a lesson. They have enough sense to see that their own interests are, in the long run, tied in with the general welfare. They have received a good scare by the threat of social revolution.

Few of them want to do what has come to be popularly called "going back to Hoover." They favor a more "progressive" candidate. They may do this reluctantly—I don't know. But they see the necessity of doing it.

• • •

This last point suggests what I think is the most important fundamental in the whole situation. This is that our greatest need of reform is in politics.

If the government is to exercise more control, and do more things for us, we must have a better administration of government.

• • •

In practice, government is a bunch of politicians. It becomes an "administration." Our Constitution and general form of government are good. But the men we get to run the government ("The Administration") often are not up to their job.

Under our present method of selecting candidates and electing men to office, it is only by chance that we get efficient men.

What do those who decide our money and credit policies know about money and credit? What do those who want to run the business of the nation know about business?

• • •

If you fall back on the idea that "the people" are ignorant, and that government can't be any better than the people, you take a hopeless position. If you accept the idea that the muddling and waste of the politicians now in power is to be excused because they represent a muddle-headed and wasteful people, where do you get? You must conclude that such an "administration" had better quit trying to run the business of the nation.

BANK Efficiency VITAL

LICENSING OF AIDES URGED

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
(Copyright, 1935, Universal Service)

New York, Dec. 5—The depression experience in the United States revealed that there were more banks in the country than bankers.

Incompetent management was the primary cause of bank suspensions and defaults.

There is a growing consciousness of the impossibility of legislating safe banking into existence. The problem is not so much of more laws as it is of developing better men.

One specific proposal is that minimum standards of education and experience be set up before men could be authorized to serve as bankers.

In advocating creation of the certified public banker, a committee of the Illinois Bankers Association urged that banking be regarded as a profession, and be recognized as such through a licensing system.

The committee suggested that those now in charge of banks be licensed on the theory that the personnel has been effectively purged through elimination of the less fit during the critical depression period. Then, in the future, bankers would be licensed by non-political state banking boards on the basis of the applicant's education, experience and personal qualities as determined in periodic examinations.

The committee did not advocate extending the licensing system to directors, but suggested that directors be chosen on the basis of experience, character and business knowledge, rather than because of their ability to bring in new accounts.

In urging the creation of certified public bankers, Messrs. Stuart, Putnam, Meech and R. O. Everrum, of Chicago, in the Journal of Business point out:

"Banking is primarily a business engaged in furnishing agriculture, industry and commerce with mediums of exchange. Many of these mediums arise as a result of banks dealing and investing activities. Banks, therefore, have in their custody the 'deposits' of what we speak of as business and the people. This is inevitably an accompaniment of the primary function.

"Since the smooth flow of production, trade and consumption depends in a major way upon a safe banking system, upon effective control of the expansion and contraction of bank credit, the principal circulating medium, banking is intimately affected with the public interest.

"There is clearly as much need to regulate the entrance and exit of bank administrative officers to and from their profession as of doctors, lawyers, nurses and accountants to and from theirs."

Licensing may or may not be the ultimate answer, but the need for improving the quality of bankers is widely recognized.

GRACE OWES BETHLEHEM

By Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 5—A report that Eugene G. Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, owed that corporation $5,206,079 as of Dec. 31, 1934, was made public by the Securities Commission today.

Grace was one of several officers listed as debtors in connection with purchases of the company's stock, contracted for in 1930. There was no indication whether the amount owed was past due.

The stock, totalling 130,910 shares, was sold to the officers at approximately the market price then current. Arrangements were made for installment payments.

The bulk of the reports covering 1934 were released earlier this year but the commission is now engaged in publishing information which was held back pending hearings on pleas of some companies that it be kept confidential.

Grace contracted to buy 67,500 shares. Other officers or directors listed debtors as of Dec. 31, 1934 were:

S. A. Buck, 15,750 shares, unpaid balance $1,489,036; Hugh Bent, 15,750 shares, unpaid balance $1,503,196; R. E. McMath, 9000 shares, $879,143; P. Mackall, 9000 shares, $923,502; Eric Mackay, 9000 shares, 750,293. J. H. Ward, 2250 shares $221,417; W. J. Brown, 1080 shares, $101,880; J. P. Reider, 690 shares, $64,785; R. H. Schlottman, 900 shares, $50,164; W. H. Johnstone, 360 shares, $33,975.

The fact that the company paid Grace $150,000 for his services in 1934 and President Charles M. Schwab $250 000 has already been published.

The "confidential" data showed this additional compensation: $90,000 each to Quincy Bent and C. Austin Dunn; $75,000 to Paul Mackall.

The SEC also made public salaries or business data which a number of other companies called confidential. This information included

SEC UTILITIES RIFT

Big Penalties Forecast

By WALTER FITZMAURICE

Washington, Dec. 5 (US)—A move by the Securities and Exchange Commission to invoke financial penalties against unregistered utility holding companies was foreshadowed today.

A New York financial journal asked the commission to declare its attitude towards new or refunding capital issues projected by companies subject to, and refusing to register under, the Wheeler-Rayburn "death sentence" act.

Without making direct comment, SEC officials in reply tersely referred to Section 4. The section declares a company which failed to register on December 1 shall not thereafter offer any of its securities at public sale

All but one of the country's top rank power systems have refused to register. Most of them are reported to have provided for their maturing obligations in anticipation of possible SEC "sanctions" after the deadline.

However, one big unregistered company is known to be contemplating a 20 million dollar bond issue for new construction. If the underwriting plans go through, it expects to ask SEC approval for its sale.

The commission said it was "crossing no bridges it hasn't reached," but pointed to these alternative weapons it might use to stop the sale of securities

1—A federal court injunction, declaring the sale in violation of the Wheeler-Rayburn Act. This would open the way for a flank attack on constitutionality by the respondent utility.

2—An order under the "Truth in Securities" section of the 1933 Securities Act requiring a declaration in the bond itself and in sales literature that the company was "a violator of the law." Such an admission would probably preclude sale of the issue.

Utilities Allowed Use of Mails

Washington, Dec. 5 (INS)—Postmaster-General Farley today announced he will allow public utilities companies which have not registered with the SEC under the provisions of the holding company act, to use the mails, pending a decision by the Supreme Court on the validity of the law. Farley said:

"Whatever may be the authority, if any, of the Postmaster-General to exclude from the mail matter sent in violation of the act, the Postmaster-General does not intend to exclude any company from using the mail, at least not before the validity of the act is judicially determined by the Supreme Court."

GASOLINE Storage Gain

The sharpest increase in gasoline storage during the current season occurred last week, when 1,265,000 barrels were added to stocks, according to American Petroleum Institute.

It is, of course, seasonal for motor fuel inventories to increase, with the normal tapering off in demand, but, at the same time there is currently an excessive production of gasoline as measured by refinery operations

Old Colony

The meeting was adjourned until 11 o'clock next Thursday, December 12.

$2 Dividend

United States Tobacco Company declared a special dividend of $2 and regular quarterly dividend of $1.25 on the common, payable January 2 to stock of record December 16.

OUTPUT LESS

Production Increases Elsewhere

This chart shows America's proportion of world production of ten selected commodities, as contained in a survey by the National Bureau of Economic Research. The American ratios in two years, 1929 and 1934, are compared.

In eight of the ten commodities, the United States last year produced less of the world total than it did in 1929. Only in gold and sugar beet output have we increased our ratio.

The conclusion derived from this study is that the United States has suffered a greater loss in production since 1929 than have other countries, in general.

It therefore follows that other countries have increased their output since the low point at a much better rate

Also, there has been a somewhat permanent shift in our world markets caused by individual countries broadening their home industries and, consequently, depending less upon the United States.

Only in the last four items on the chart, petroleum, artificial silk, gold, and sugar beets, was world output in 1934 higher than in 1929.

Hongkong on New Silver Basis

Hongkong, Dec. 5 (AP)—The Hongkong government decided today to nationalize silver and to manage its currency on a theoretical bullion standard.

The government attributed the action to speculation causing the Hongkong dollar to fluctuate dangerously. The move also was accepted generally as a result of the persistent deflationary tendency of the Hongkong dollar against China's dollar.

An ordinance passed by the legislative council provided for the nationalization of silver and established the exchange fund to enable the government to restrict dollar fluctuations

The Hongkong dollar was quoted in the New York market, before the government measures, at 35 cents and the Shanghai dollar at 29 cents)

LEADER Confides to WORKER

COMMUNISTIC VIEWS CHANGE

By B. C. Forbes

One employer tells me how he nipped the planting of Communistic seeds in his establishment, employing 1400. The secretary of a local association confided to him that a certain employe had turned Communistic and was actually striving to stir up unrest. The suggestion was made that the fellow should be fired forthwith.

Instead, the employer, sincerely interested in his workfolks, quietly asked the reputed Communist to come to his private office. After greetings, this conversation followed:

"How long have you been with us?"

"Over ten years."

"You have been well taken care of all this time, haven't you?"

"Yes."

"If you wanted a tooth pulled, would you go to a blacksmith or a barber or a bootblack?"

"Why, no."

"If you wanted to learn about government, would you go to men who have studied and taught government, or would you listen to somebody knowing nothing about it?"

"I would go to a dentist to have a tooth pulled."

"Then hear that you have been listening to fellows who know nothing about government, but want only to stir up trouble."

"Have you ever visited Russia or Italy or Germany?"

"No."

"Well, I have visited them all. So, I know what I'm talking about when I tell you that you are very much better off than the workers in those countries. Every time I go abroad I feel like going down on my knees when I return to this country and thanking the Lord for the life it is possible for Americans to live."

In a few more minutes the budding Communist had turned from his job, he expressed profound gratitude.

And we will add to this the information that a large New York wire house is circulating literature heralding the return of the railroad to a dividend basis. However, with the railroad picture brightening perceptibly it might be a good idea to accept the advice of out-of-towners and look around at home.

In an article in the Savings Bank Journal, out today, Henry M. Pierce, Massachusetts bank commissioner, says improper management was the basic cause of failures in this state during the dangerous years. He adds that the operation of a bank may be guided by statutes and regulations, but its success actually depends primarily on its management. And management must avoid seven pitfalls to success.

These are: One man control of the board; accepting every kind of deposit from any source at higher rates of interest than warranted; placing greater emphasis on investment return than on safety of principal; over-emphasis on rapid growth and expansion rather than conservative progress; lending on speculative propositions for speculative purposes; investing in speculative equities and securities, and neglecting to sell securities on collateral loans when protection of bank deposits demands such action. The only protection for a depositor, we add, is to know these faults and then to point to know your banker.

Rail action this week is naturally pleasing but it is not encouraging to throw caution to the winds. Current prices are not high in a relative sense. But they have been obtained by somewhat sustained plugging. A rest after such exertion would be neither surprising nor bearish. All in all we look for some resistance between 42-44 on the 20 Dow-Jones index and suggest that new purchases in general be confined to setbacks. At the same time industrials are not abiding the rise and the usual secondary reaction may supply the rails with an excuse to dip a bit.

STOCKS Firm at CLOSE

RAIL SHARES RECALCITRANT

Rails alone of the major groups were recalcitrant. An assortment of motors, mining shares, oils and specialties worked ahead fractions to around a point higher.

An outstanding feature was an 8 point rise in A. O. Smith, one of the mid-west automobile equipment stocks recently brought to the big board from the curb.

Prominent shares in the upward cycle included American Telephone, Chrysler, International Nickel, Kennecott, Johns-Manville, Atlas Tack, International Nickel, Schenley Distillers and United Corporation preferred.

Among losers were such rails as New York Central, Union Pacific, Southern Pacific and Great Northern.

The continued extraordinary heavy movement of gold into this country, which reached the stupendous sum of around $90,000,000 yesterday, was considered a significant evidence that conditions were far from rosy. The weekly statement of the Bank of England showing a loss of 2,834,000,000 francs, further backed up views of a pessimistic nature.

Cheerful Reports

Meanwhile, reports from the domestic business front continued, in the main, cheerful. Numerous extra and increased dividends were announced and earnings reports reflected healthy growth.

The optimistic views of some of the business leaders at the Manufacturers' Association formed the basis of discussion in income quarters.

A further item of extreme interest to board rooms was the current controversy between various schools of economic thought concerning the relationship between the railroads and the industrial divisions of the stock market, which has been a dominating message, as respects the averages, in recent weeks.

One faction contended that the industrials had scored remarkable gains over the past eight months without the aid of the rails and argued that it was not unreasonable to look for a similar performance by the latter. Now that indications point definitely to the carriers having turned the famed corner.

Others remained of the opinion that neither group could go very far on a permanent basis without the aid of the other.

Income Higher

American Water Works & Electric Company reports for 12 months ended October 31 last net income of $3,187,483, equal to $1.14 a share on the common, against $3,033,361 or $1.05 a common share, in preceding 12 months.

Wilcox Rich

State St. Gossip

It has been years since much has been heard of the blast furnace theory of stock market operation. At one time the rate of blast furnace building was considered a good guide to the approximate level of the business cycle and the market was considered a safe bet when a number of lighted furnaces advanced above 60 per cent of the total available for iron making. Now "old-fashioned" propie got out of the market in the summer of 1929 on this theory and did themselves a lot of good.

The excellent Firestone report is followed by gossip in the Street that at the next directors' meeting to act on dividends the 40-cent rate will be increased or an extra will be declared.

Chrysler continues to be the lure of the bears for some reason or other, and even Tuesday morning further shorts were added to the fairly large total. Some of these covered with considerable loss before the close.

Heavy industries are due for a spurt shortly as a result of the crash in the bids on government-financed projects before the deadline set by President Roosevelt just passed. However, so great has been the accumulation of pending work that Washington agents of several interested manufacturers report privately the deadline is almost certain to be extended.

The Street was alive with talk of an impending advance in crude oil in the Mid-Continent, but these reports received no substantiation among prominent oil companies. As a matter of fact, an executive of one of the largest companies said he could see no justification for an increase at this time.

BANKERS ANSWER QUESTION:

How Good Is Business In New England?

By LUTHER CONANT, JR.

THE BANNING SITUATION—This is the fourth in a series of five articles published this week by the Boston Evening American on the general business outlook in New England. The last article on State Street, will appear tomorrow.

Bond Market Tone Is Stable

The offerings, however, were well taken and values showed a fairly stable tone in spite of irregularity in secondary issues.

Loans of Southern Railway and New York Central were down half a point, while narrower losses appeared in those of Nickel Plate and a few more.

Almost to a man they refuse to be quoted on any predictions, but admit that things are better.

More Hopeful

The president of one large Boston bank expressed himself as more hopeful at present than at any time during the depression, saying:

"While there is no great increase in the commercial borrowing, it is evident that the demand for credit has at least started. And it should continue as long as business activity continues to improve.

"Certainly encouraging are the latest figures of the Federal Reserve Board, of $27,000,000 in commercial loans.

"As everyone knows, there is a great surplus of credit. Although the small man has not started to take up that surplus, he is thinking about credit. That is a hopeful indication

"What recovery there has been in date has been in spite of Washington.

Ralph Hornblower, of Hornblower & Weeks, stated he believes the low point in the decline of credit demand had been reached last July, but confessed he did no more than "nothing freshets" in the capital market.

Definitely optimistic was an executive of one large investment organization as he pointed to the great volume of refunding now being done.

"The capital market undoubtedly is easing up. This is indicated by the enormous volume of refunding operations which have been effected during the past few months. In fact, the market has come through this refunding stage in which it is the usual phase of the cycle, with flying colors."

Matter of Future

"With general business activity increasing, the capital market would seem to be in the normal phase of the cycle, namely, the provision of new capital for the extension of existing plants and enterprises.

"The provision of capital for strictly new enterprises is still a matter of the future.

"This movement in the capital market represents an entirely normal development and has probably come about as a natural phase of a broad recovery movement, irrespective of the politics of the moment.

The other president of another important bank added a further summation of present refunding activities:

"Refunding will continue as long as the low money rate exists. There is relatively speaking, been a great volume of bond refunding. Attention is now being turned to preferred stocks.

"I cannot see any hope for new capital issues but a demand for credit has started.

On the other hand, a high executive of a bank "down the street" expressed his hope that demand for new capital would come with the return of confidence.

It was generally agreed on Wall street that the inability of New England textile plants to make money even when running at capacity, was a dark cloud on the new capital market.

But all agreed that there was a new activity in the security markets which looked well, and even cited examples of this was the cheering statement from Dean Edmund E. Wright of the Harvard Business School.

"There has been a pick-up in all fields of activity in employment. We have noticed it most particularly in investment banking"

Medford Diver Reveals Horror Under Sea

HELLO EVERYBODY:

You know, boys and girls, deep-sea diving is an adventurous calling. There's something about that underwater stuff that sends a cold chill up your old Headline Hunter's spine. I'd rather be up in the air any time than under the water. Wouldn't you? A fighting pilot in an airplane in war time, to me, has an easier job than the fellow under water in the submarine.

CORNELIUS CAMPBELL, 247 Park street, Medford, is the deep sea diver we hear about today. His son, Kenneth, sent in his father's greatest thrill, and boy, oh boy! What a close shave! Get a load of this:

Back in July, 1931, while Diver Campbell was on the bottom—that's diver's slang for under water—the row boat that held his air lines and pump was tied to the under part of a draw bridge. Two air pump men were working the pumps and Campbell's "tender" was watching the lines when, to their astonishment, the boat suddenly rose right up in the air!

The drawbridge had gone up, taking the boat with it! Well, sir, a thing like that is dangerous enough for the fellows in the boat but think of poor Campbell down there on the bottom of the river at the mercy of his air pumps! One of the men quickly cut the rope but not quickly enough. The rowboat dropped, turned over, and filled with water. And overboard went the men on the pumps; the tender—and the precious air pumps!

The men manning the pumps swam for shore. The pumps were filled with water and they figured that Campbell was already drowning. But a tender's job is to stick with his diver like a captain to his ship. And that tender stuck. He clung to the water-filled boat with one hand and to Campbell's life line with the other. If he once let go of that life line, he knew, the diver would be lost.

While all this was taking place on the surface, let's go down to the bottom of the river with Papa Campbell and see what was happening to him in his predicament—the worst that can come to a diver.

"The second I felt the pumps stop," diver Campbell says, "I knew something had happened up above, so I closed my air-valve to hold whatever air there was in my suit. I closed it before the water had time to rush in. Next I felt myself pulled up about six feet or so and dropped again to the bottom. I thought it was all over with me then but soon a gentle pull started me up to the surface and I was soon able to grab hold of the edge of the sunken boat and hold on by the side of my tender."

Well, sir, it had been a tough job for the faithful tender to pull up his boss, handicapped as the tender was, hanging on to a half sunken boat, and it was only possible because Campbell had shut off his exhaust valve and the air in his suit made him somewhat bouyant.

But that air had been breathed over and over again Unless something drastic was done, Campbell would die of suffocation.

Campbell says nothing in his life tasted so sweet as that rush of fresh air. The broken glass cut his face a little but that was nothing. As the pure life-giving air went into his lungs he grinned with the sheer joy of living. Cries from shore told him that a rescue boat was on its way.

All they had to do now, he thought, was to cling to their sunken boat till help arrived but a terrible shock was in store for him—a shock that takes longer to tell than it did to happen.

Their boat started to sink! With the air gone from the heavy diving suit, Campbell was too heavy for the water-logged rowboat. It rolled over as it went under, the men trying desperately to hold on. Campbell was again face to face with death! The tender might keep himself afloat but the diver, with his hundreds of pounds of metal, must go to the bottom.

Campbell says nothing in his life tasted so sweet as that water rushed into the opening in his helmet. He grabbed something and, realizing that it was his tender's foot, let go. No use taking that brave man to his death too—lights flashed before his eyes—his lungs felt as though they were bursting.

On the surface the brave tender floundered around weakly in the water as the rescue boat arrived. They pulled him aboard exhausted and as he felt gasping in the bottom of the boat the horror-stricken rescuers saw a rope clenched in his bloodless hand.

It was Campbell's life line—the rope that means life or death to a diver! Close to death himself, the tender had never let go of the thin line that held Campbell to this world!

Well, sir, they pulled Campbell up—more dead than alive. He had been under water all of five minutes and his face was blue and his lungs full of water. It was nip and tuck with the Grim Reaper for hours but after pulmotors and all that science could do had been done—

Gosh! What a CLOSE call!!! And what a tender! I'm sorry I haven't got his name. IT'S THE NAME OF A HERO!

Incidentally, boys and girls, perhaps your name is on tomorrow's story and tomorrow's check. The story is a wow. SEE YOU TOMORROW.

PAUL WHITEMAN SALUTING BING CROSBY

By N. F. T.

When two radio stars switch commercial settings, for example one turning his cheese sponsor adrift in order to take on soap selling, the other assuming the deserted duties, there is call for lively celebration in radioland.

Which is by way of reminding loudspeaker patrons that Paul Whiteman and Bing Crosby are broadcasting with one another during the "Music Hall" feature (WEEI) tonight between 10 and 11 o'clock. Even if they are almost 3000 miles apart.

SHARING SPOTLIGHT

Well rounded Mr. Whiteman will surrender his network place to the crooning Mr. Crosby as of the end of this month. Tonight the now not so stout band boss hails Bing by allotting him a portion of the a forecmentioned hour. Crosby is ready and waiting to sing for the coast to coast air audience, his voice to originate in Hollywood. Music of Jimmy Dorsey and his tune troupe is providing the West Coast orchestral background.

After looking on while the Ben Bernie program planners and Ben himself conched a wide-eyed studio audience as to good stooging conduct, when to applaud and when to laugh, previous to the "Old Maestro" sending his Tuesday night turn across the country from Boston this week, some mischievous offside ideas take shape.

One of these nights, when everything is seemingly all set and visitors duly warned, there will be an "All-America Radio Rascal" break in on the doings and throw the whole program off balance. Meaning as did that tipsy football fan who plunged on the field for Dartmouth against Princeton two weeks ago.

Alas, however, such a fun-loving fellow would probably be promptly jailed if he attempted to put spontaneous pep in a radio routine. He would come to know that broadcasters are the most serious people in the world about comedy.

RADIO SEARCH

Now that WEEI of Wellesley has changed hands, the call letters will more than likely become WKDX soon. If the new management are dickering for studio space in the Lenox and Myles Standish hotels, with the former establishment standing vacant, it is considered slightly too stiff a rental for quartering the enterprise.

JEWELRY JUBILEE

Washington Street Firm Cuts Cake

Celebrating its 50th anniversary today, tomorrow and Saturday, the Washington Jewelry Company will give away 1000 birthday cakes which will contain lucky tickets entitling holders to turn them in for prizes.

Governor Curley and other state officials will participate in the celebration of the Golden Jubilee. The jubilee will especially commemorate a half century of service in Boston and New England.

The Washington Jewelry Company, now located at 385 Washington street, started in as a small establishment in Bromfield street 50 years ago. Today it is one of the largest credit jewelry houses in Boston, and has over a quarter of a million customers.

Among the pioneers in the jewelry credit business, the Washington Jewelry Company has instituted a "square deal" credit plan.

Descendants of the founders—sons and grandsons—still are directing the affairs of this large concern. It has been in the same family control for three generations.

Today hundreds of telephone calls and telegrams of congratulations were pouring into the main Washington street store from friends and customers all over New England.

The tickets that on Friday morning will go with the birthday cakes will bring watches, diamond rings, dishes, radios, lighters, jewelry, leather goods and novelties to the lucky winners.

PRIZE OFFERED FOR BEST GAG

If so, here is your chance to share in a list of cash prizes and guest theater tickets offered by the Boston Evening American in conjunction with the showing of Darryl Zanuck's musical comedy film "Thanks a Million," opening today at Loew's State and Orpheum theaters.

There is no red tape—no complicated rules. It's all very simple and easy. Merely fill in the "Balloon" to the right of Fred Allen's face with the pun, gag or joke. That's about all there is to it. Now for the prizes. In other words you furnish the gags, and if they're funny enough we'll furnish the cash and guest theater tickets.

Do not mail in your gags until the complete set of photographs has appeared. Today's picture, showing a scene from this highly amusing film, is the second of the series. The final one appears on Monday.

The idea for this interesting contest was inspired by the production of "Thanks a Million," with its imposing cast of stars including Dick Powell, Ann Dvorak, Fred Allen, Paul Whiteman and his band, Rubinoff and his violin, Ramona, Raymond Walburn and the Yacht Club boys.

Mail your entries to the "Thanks a Million" Gag Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, Mass., no later than Tuesday midnight, December 10.

The prizes are as follows: $10 in cash for the first choice; $5 for the second selection and $2.50 each for third and fourth choices. The next five will each receive $1. The following 25 selected by the judges will each be awarded a pair of guest theater tickets for either Loew's State or Orpheum theater.

MR. FIXIT AIDS TRAFFIC

M'Sweeney Lauded By Commuter

By MR. FIXIT

This department has been installed as a public service for Boston Evening American readers. It will endeavor to solve problems and fix troubles dealing with city, state or public utility service. Requests must be specific and brief. No anonymous requests nor matters of a purely private nature can be considered.

A compliment for the Boston Police Commissioner Eugene M. McSweeney is voiced in this communication from M. E. M. of Cheshire street, Jamaica Plain:

"Tonight there was a traffic officer opposite Gilbert street, by the entrance to the Forest Hills Station. It was a very pleasant surprise, for I doubted a little whether an officer could be stationed there.

"It seemed almost too much to ask of you that an officer is needed so much at that spot.

"I certainly appreciate your kindness and efficiency and I know many others do too."

M. E. M. had complained that a traffic officer was needed at this point. The police commissioner was dubious, but willing to try. A policeman was immediately stationed at the spot; he will remain there for an experimental period, and if a traffic officer is found to be needed there, one will be stationed permanently for the rush hours.

* * *

E. F. M. of Custer street, Jamaica Plain, writes:

"On a small unfinished section of Goldsmith street, Jamaica Plain, are several holes in the road which are always filled with dirty water, an unsanitary and unsightly condition. We would be glad if a load of gravel could be placed in them to bring away with foul smells in summer and ice and mud in the winter."

"Mr. Fixit" will look into the case if the communicant will specifically state what part of the street needs the repairing.

Money-Loving Reds

This weakness is only secondary to their frenzied desire to escape from Stalin's workers' Utopia and come to Jefferson's accursed America.

While they offer up secret thanks that they are not perpetually paroled and tracked prisoners of the OGPU, they begin to indoctrinate their American pupils with the enslaving theories of Karl Marx and Saint Lenin.

But United States Controller McCarl has happily hit on the way to stop their subversive activities in the District of Columbia.

THEY MUST TAKE AN OATH THAT THEY WILL NOT TEACH COMMUNISM, ELSE THEY CANNOT DRAW THEIR SALARIES.

THE McCARL PLAN SHOULD BE ADOPTED EVERYWHERE THROUGHOUT THE UNITED STATES.

For if there is one thing these Communists love more dearly than their Marxist doctrines it is Uncle Sam's long green.

Politicians! Take Note!

Though other, principally local, issues may have been factors in the general unseating of executives, one truth stands out from all others. VOTERS ARE DISSATISFIED. THEY DEMAND A CHANGE FOR THE BETTER.

Significant also is the fact George J. Bates was returned to the Salem mayoralty without even a single opponent contesting his re-election. His record for tax reduction, elimination of waste and extravagance, and efficiency has received abundant praise.

That Newburyport voters share the general desire for new faces in government was seen in restoration to the mayor's chair of Andrew J. "Bossy" Gillis who throughout the campaign admitted quite frankly that he intended wholesale "shake-ups."

Municipal voters have spoken. They demand changes.

Radio Proves Worth

That two-way radio is a valuable asset to police work was effectively demonstrated Tuesday following the attempted escape of five convicts from Charlestown State Prison.

Speedy capture of the fugitives and frustration of an even more serious break were possible principally because continuous communication was able to be maintained between the scene of trouble and police headquarters.

For two years the Boston Evening American has pointed out advantages of two-way radio and urged its installation throughout the city. This will be soon a reality, for a contract has been signed to extend the system now operating in Division Nine, Roxbury, to all police districts.

A Lesson for Boys

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

Glenn boarded the car at Rosedale, Calif., and found himself a prisoner. He lived by eating seeds from cotton bolls and scooping up water from a drain.

Like many another boy, Glenn FORGOT that when he threw off parental restrictions he lost parental protection.

Our Guests Salute Our Flag! -:-

By Nelson Harding

These unwelcome and ungrateful
Guests that now infest our country,
While enjoying all its freedom
Heap their insults on its symbol.

Hospitality abusing,
Haters of our institutions,
Now become bold flag insulters;
And quite ripe for deportation.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

New York, Dec. 5—Restaurants in Manhattan, like hotels a few years ago, have reached the saturation point. Scores are dangling by thin threads and any number have dropped into the bankruptcy abyss. The craze to open cafes was inspired by repeal. A cafe looked like money in the bank.

Many, with idle bank rolls and eye peeled for investment, believed all they needed were a crack chef, a good location and a "celebrity" as a front man et voila!

O. O. McIntyre

Crowds came on the gallop but only for the opening of free food and drinks and then back to old haunts or another opening.

In the Broadway area of the 40's more than 200 sizeable restaurants have opened with a flourish and closed as quickly since the first of the year. The proprietors were new to the business and unfamiliar with the kitchen side. Their assets were a wide acquaintance.

The debacle, however, has had little effect on established places. Not many had to hang up shutters. Conducting a restaurant is one of the hazardous callings. Without experience it can dwindle a bank account as quickly as backing a play.

I notice the celebrated Claremont Inn, overlooking the Hudson from the upper Riverside knoll and especially delightful amid the slippery shadows of dusk, is dark and forlorn again. Several times it has bloomed into activity with a crack band, gaily umbrella'd terrace tabled, but soon languishes.

It is cannot be made popular it should be preserved for gourmets who still dote on excellent food, leisurely service and without crouching madmen trying to blow the lining out of slip horns.

Two surprising depression skyrockets, however, are the spread of the Longchamps restaurants and the come-back of the Hotel St. Regis. The first Longchamps went hopelessly bankrupt down town and the heaviest creditor, a produce man, took it over to see what he could salvage.

He "banished" tipping by adding 10 per cent to the check and went in for an eye and stomach appeal with geometrical window displays of vegetables, the pick of his crop.

Each one, there are half a dozen, has become a success and the produce man makes more with them than selling produce.

The St. Regis was once ace of bon ton hotels. Then came the blight of years. During the halcyon days it was sold by the Astor estate to the Duke estate which put six million dollars into refurnishings. But it did not click and went back to the Astors for interest on the mortgage and accrued taxes.

Vincent Astor began to toy with it as a hobby, revamped and suffused life. Until this new blood. It had degenerated into a mausoleum, but with the magic of Vincent Astor's name and the force of ideas from high priced helpers they are beginning to talk of the St. Regis set as they do the Colony set.

Among patrons of the rejuvenated St. Regis dining rooms are Mr. and Mrs. Jacques Balsan, she who was born Consuelo Vanderbilt and was later the Duchess of Marlborough.

Also—and most important of all—Mrs. Hamilton McK. Twombley, born Gertrude Vanderbilt. She rarely appears in public place. No one really reaches the Olympian peak of New York society until they have been at a Thursday night dinner at No. 1 East "1st st., Mrs. Twombley's town residence.

These dinners are the nearest to Buckingham in America. Solid gold plate and a footman behind almost every chair.

Listen, World!

By Elsie Robinson

"You can't tell me," said the disgusted business man, "that all these idle fellows couldn't find work if they wanted it. Why, take my case—"

He proceeded with the all familiar tale. His house is in need of renovation. Cleaning out gutters — renewing clothes lines — painting garbage cans. The simple things any man likes to do for himself if he has time.

But my friend hasn't time, so he began offering the jobs to the endless file of "aspirants." You know the rest. Nine out of ten of them faded before they'd been at it two hours.

Elsie Robinson

"The lying loafers!" snorted the indignant householder. "There they were, young, husky, whining about their hard times—and when they're offered a job, what do they do? I'll tell you—they don't WANT work."

But this, I protested, doesn't necessarily follow. Doubtless there are thousands of deliberate parasites. But there are other thousands who look and act like parasites, who are really laboring under a jinx. And we've hung that jinx on them!

WE'VE ACTUALLY BRED THEM TO BE LOAFERS.

We have deprived them of those conditions which keep men from being loafers.

Outwardly, they seem to be fit. They look, speak and in many ways act like normal, human beings. But they aren't. There's something wrong inside—something lacking—undeveloped.

It isn't fair to judge an idle young man of 1935 by the standards of 1905. We are still living in a hand-made world in 1905. A man was still an individual, not just a carbon machine. His self-respect and the respect given him were based on his ability to take care of himself—do all the basic human chores.

Naturally, under those conditions a boy grew up expecting to do things himself. He was familiar with the idea he should use tools. And that he was a fool or a bum if he couldn't or wouldn't. And he came across accordingly.

But today—where's the average boy to learn how to use tools? What's he to use them for? The machine age has arrived and we have surrendered to it wholesale, with never a thought of the consequences. We use machines for every purpose under the heaven. We're machine-served from the moment we are born.

It has never occurred to us that in producing and promoting all these machines of steel we may have tragically crippled the machine. But we have!

NATION IS CRIPPLED

And we have crippled it mentally and spiritually as well as manually. With our ability to serve ourselves with our own hands has gone something infinitely more precious than handicraft. We have lost the self-respect, the pride, the honor that went with the old individualism.

Some will say this is sentimentalizing about the unemployed. It isn't sentimentality to investigate the condition of a fine-looking work horse, is it? See if his wind is broken—if he's invisibly crippled.

But a man can be crippled inside as well as any other animal, and in infinitely more ways. And thousands of our modern unemployed are "unassimilables," are actual criminals.

That's why we still have 11,000,000 idle men after spending incredible billions to relieve them. They aren't an accident, these eleven millions.

They are inevitable consequence of taking away these standards and responsibilities which built character into human flesh.

And we'll never cure this catastrophe by piling on more and more taxes—giving more and more relief. WE'VE GOT TO BEGIN AT THE OTHER END . . . START WITH THEM BEFORE THEY BECOME CRIPPLES . . . STOP BREEDING WE ARE RESPONSIBLE

Dear Govt. -:-

By Winston Norman

Mr. Frankfurter
Asst. President
U. S. Govt.

DEAR MR. FRANKFURTER:

I seen the other day where you are the Professor which puts ideas in Mr. Roosevelt's head, will you put one in it for me?

The idea is as follows, Mr. Frankfurter. I think he better run on 2 Platforms next year, because there is 2 kinds of U. S. Voters that he will have to fool.

I run into both of them in a Cigar Store this morning. The 1st one was the Cigar Man, he is a Tory and he says, "It won't be long now, we will throw out this man Roosevelt which is thinking up funny schemes to take our Job away!"

Just then a very shabby Customer come in, he lit a 2nd-hand cigar butt & says, "Well, it won't be long now, us Radicals is going to overthrow this Tory Roosevelt, which is useing funny plans to try and put us to work!"

I wanted to pacify them, so I says, "My Friends, Mr. Roosevelt is the man for both of you, it don't matter what kind of a thing you are, he will give you the Fireside Chat that you need."

Right then I seen where the Pres. had lost 2 votes, on acct. the U. S. People don't know which way he is going to jump with his politics.

So please ask him, Mr. Frankfurter, is he going to jump Conservitive or is he jumping Radical? Or maybe if he would use 2 Platforms like I told you, he could make everybody happy.

He could just jump from one Platform to the other, and folks would be so mixed up that they would make a mistake & vote for him again.

Yours Worried,
W. NORMAN.

The China Clipper

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

A silver-winged queen of the air, greatest of flying ships, takes off from the California Coast, China bound. Her cargo is two tons of mail addressed to the Hawaiian Islands, to Guam, to the Philippines and faraway China. The President of the United States speeds her on her way with the message that she symbolizes an American heritage of courage, daring, initiative and enterprise.

Edwin C. Hill

More than 5000 miles of trackless ocean will be spanned by the new service which the modern China Clipper has begun. This service brings Asia within five days of the United States. Honolulu becomes merely an overnight journey. It is, indeed, the first step in the most fascinating development of air-travel.

One may well imagine that the ghosts of the heroic mariners who sailed the old-time clippers of sail and oak out to China a century ago must have thrilled to the spectacle of the silver airship recapturing for America the blue pennant of merchant marine leadership, that proud pennants which they held, unrivaled, in the days of the swift, staunch, wooden ships which carried their rich burdens of tea and silk between Canton and San Francisco in the days when the stars and stripes gleamed on every sea and whipped the breeze in every port.

CENTURY OF PROGRESS

No event that this writer can recall so symbolizes a century of progress as the dramatic departure from San Francisco of the China Clipper of the air. For it was exactly 100 years ago that the first of the old-time clipper ships set sail from the United States for the China Seas.

The story of mankind contains nothing more thrilling to the imagination than the exploits of those wonderful old sailing ships, the fastest ever designed, in the days before steam and engines robbed seafaring of so much of its romance. In those days, a century ago, and in the years up to the time of the Civil War, the whole world thrilled to the achievements of those fast ships, which contested with each other for the speed records from the Far East to the British Channel and to the coasts of America.

The race course was from Shanghai to London, and from Canton to San Francisco and to Boston or New York. The racers were the fastest sailing ships with which man ever challenged time and storm. The fleet clippers of a century ago carried lustrous silk and fragrant tea.

Every year the tea fleet raced homeward the first and best of the season's crop. For some 30 years, between 1835 and 1865, the clipper ship racers stirred up more excitement than is aroused nowadays by the record-smashing achievements of the Rex or the Normandie.

Timing their arrival at Shanghai or Canton to an exact hour, the skippers of the old-time clipper ships—shrewd traders and business men as well as skillful seamen—Down East Yankees almost to a man—took on cargo in breakneck haste, with a wary eye on their rivals loading at nearby piers, and then put to sea, clapping on every yard of sail that the weather permitted. A great fleet of these racers spread out from China almost within the same 24 hours.

HISTORIC COMPETITION

From then on, it was a desperate contest every mile of the way to San Francisco bay or Boston harbor or London river. Progress of the leading ships was reported from time to time as their white wings were sighted from coast guard stations and pilots ashore. The news of their passing was recorded on page one of all the newspapers. It was big news.

It far transcended the importance of commercial news. It carried the spirit of national rivalry.

American clippers were in the great race with British-built flyers. The names of the crack ships, Cutty Sark, Thermopylae, Spindrift, Lightning, Donald McKay, Ariel and many others, were as familiar to every school girl and school boy as the names of crack transatlantic liners are today. New York, Boston and San Francisco newspapers of three-quarters of a century ago featured the stories of these thrilling tea fleet racers and carried quaint woodcuts of the most famous ships. Steam was just coming in. But sail was very much alive.

They did their work, those marvellous old clippers, on a watery stage which swept from Africa to Australia and from Asia to Madagascar. It was a stage of heroes and rascals, of golden courage and black villainy; a stage of brave hearts and bloody deeds, of ruthless pirates and resolute mariners.

The clipper ship seaman had to fight not only typhoons—those oriental cousins of the cyclone and the hurricane, vast cones of wind spinning at incredible speed, stirring up frightful calmness of sea—but they had also to stand off the pirates who infested the race courses from China to the western world.

A DRAMATIC FAREWELL

They are gone to the graveyard of the sea, these grand old clippers, and with them the romance of the tea trade. Such as have survived are preserved like museum pieces.

One such is the Star of New Zealand. They brought her out from snug harbor the other day, when the China Clipper of the air took off on her flashing course, and anchored her by the Golden Gate.

And presently, as the bands played and the flags waved and thousands cheered, the Twentieth century roared over the Nineteenth. The China Clipper of 1935, gleaming high above in the blue, signaled a respectful goodby to the grand old veteran who had done her work, and could only stand by and wish her young successor the best of sun and wind and the favor of Providence.

Senators Forget Oath

By James T. Williams, Jr.

Under the American system of government every Senator and representative in Congress takes an oath to provide for the common defense.

Senator Nye, of North Dakota; Senator Clark, of Missouri; Senator Bone, of Washington, and Senator Pope, of Idaho, are four Senators to whom this solemn commitment appears to mean not very much. An examination of the record fails to disclose that any one of these four Senators has undertaken to provide for the Common Defense by word or deed.

"NOT VOTING"

Not all defense legislation is enacted by a roll call vote. But the roll call votes, so far as a recent examination reveals, shows these four Senators recorded either as "Not Voting" or as voting against the building up of the Common Defense on land and sea and in the air.

These four Senators seem to be making common cause with the propagandists who are condemning schools, colleges and universities which see fit to require students to train themselves for the Common Defense.

This is not "compulsory military service," and to insinuate that it is to distort the record. The Senators who have stooped to this deception are getting their reward in the form of countrywide publicity at the hands of a sinister coalition of political Reds, Pinks and Yellows who are attempting to undermine the common defense.

These four Senators will doubtless have much to say at the next session of Congress regarding economy and the desirability of reducing taxation. Their enthusiasm for lower taxes will doubtless be limited largely to votes against providing for the Army and Navy and their air forces the funds which are sorely needed to build them up to the strength national security requires.

ENEMY OF DEFENSE

Already Senator Nye has been making speeches during the congressional recess which show him to be an enemy of the common defense.

Senator Clark has written for publication an attack upon the common defense that is a crude imitation of Senator Nye's guerilla warfare against it.

Nor do these four senators content themselves with voting against defense legislation, writing against it. They are supporting an iniquitous proposal to withdraw federal funds from any school, college or university which maintains military training.

This un-American measure is in fact a federal force bill. Its enactment would not only be a blow to the common defense but an indefensible invasion of the rights of the states.

INSULT TO VETERANS

The American Legion and other organizations of veterans should not wait until Congress reconvenes to expose the activities against the common defense, not only of the four senators who vote against it but of all national legislators who are apparently indifferent to that part of their official oath which pledges them to provide for the common defense.

It is an insult to American veterans for any senator or representative in Congress to assume that he can win the political support of the American Legion and other organizations of veterans by voting for veteran legislation and against defense legislation.

Few and far between are the veterans whose support can be purchased by such unpatriotic hypocrisy.

The defense program enacted under President Roosevelt's leadership must be supported by Congress next year and in the years ahead if the national defense is to be made effective.

The Senator or Representative in Congress who votes against this program, writes against it, or orates against it—be his name Nye, Clark, Bone, Pope or some other name—will not only show himself to be the enemy of all veterans, but a dangerous enemy of the United States.
